RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — President Humberto Castelo Branco says his government is ready to join in action against the Cuban regime of Premier Fidel Castro.

Castelo Branco told a televised news conference Friday night Brazil "is prepared to participate in any punitive action that may be adopted against Cuba."

He did not elaborate on this statement during the carefully-controlled news conference, most of which was devoted to domestic affairs.

The Brazilian government broke diplomatic relations with Cuba last Wednesday, leaving Mexico, Chile, Bolivia and Uruguay the only Latin American nations maintaining formal ties with Havana.

TOKYO (UPI) First Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan said today the Soviet Union would give military support to Cuba if the island were attacked by the United States.

The visiting Kremlin troubleshooter said also that Russia supports Indonesia's "crush Malaysia" campaign.

Mikoyan's remarks were

By MATTHEW T. KENNY

MIAMI (UPI) — An American mystery man broadcast a series of Spanish code ciphers on a powerful short wave station beamed at Cuba Saturday, fanning unconfirmed reports of impending new exile attacks against the island.

Havana Radio made no comment on a Washington newspaper (Star) story Friday that two exile groups staged landings in Cuba Friday.

But radio monitors here noted an apparent attempt by Havana to interfere with the mystery code broadcast.

The American, who has been heard many times before, reads a series of four-digit numerals in Spanish. His 30-minute transmission Saturday drew attention because it was preceded for the first time by the playing of the popular Cuban song, "Siboney," and also by the fact that the

Pentagon Reports Over 1,000 American Casualties in South Viet Nam Warfare

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — American casualties in South Viet Nam continue to climb but still are only a fraction of heavy losses suffered by the far larger South Vietnamese forces.

The total of U.S. casualties—killed, wounded, missing—Saturday stands at slightly over 1,000 since this country began stepping up its activity in Viet Nam at the start of 1961, according to official Pentagon figures.

The latest tally shows that of the over-all total, 131 U.S. personnel died from action by "hostile forces," with another 98 dead from accidents or other noncombat causes.

During the same period, overall casualties among South Vietnamese troops has reached more than 41,800, on the basis of estimates made in Saigon. The fatality total presumably is heavy in the deadly guerrilla warfare.

Washington was mystified Saturday by a comment of Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, made during a speech paying tribute to Americans aiding in the war against the Viet Cong. The Viet Nam chief of state said that "more than 300 American heroes have given their lives to this land."

Pentagon officials insisted that the weekly, cumulative summary of U.S. casualties is accurate and that the latest count of 229 deaths from both combat and noncombat causes is the correct one.

In addition to the deaths, the U.S. list shows 867 wounded or injured, with nine missing.

There is, of course, a huge difference in the manpower of the U.S. force and that of South Viet Nam—about 15,500 for the United States, 350,000 in the regular and paramilitary units of South Viet Nam. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has said the plan is to add another 50,000 to the Vietnamese armed strength.

So far, McNamara and other administration leaders have not sent regular combat units into Viet Nam as was done in Korea to wage war under full U.S. control alongside Vietnamese units.

100,000 Men Launch Desert Strike Games

BYLTHE, Calif. (AP)—Nearly 100,000 men take up blank-loaded arms Sunday as Calonia and Nezona go to war.

The two mythical countries are part of Exercise Desert Strike. Their battleground is 14,500 square miles of desert split by the California-Arizona border.

The U.S. Strike Command picked this area for its massive yearly maneuvers because it offers plenty of room for tanks, jet fighters, artillery and paratroopers.

Dust Winds Reduce Area Visibility

High winds from the south and southeast kicked up dust in the Colorado Springs area late Saturday afternoon, reducing visibility at times to less than a mile, according to the U.S. Weather Bureau at Peterson Field.

The Weather Bureau said high winds blowing off the plains to the east and southeast of Colorado Springs brought much of the dust into the area and that as the gusty winds struck this area more dust was kicked up.

First Lutheran to Build $225,000 Sanctuary

First Lutheran Church at 1515 North Cascade Avenue will begin work sometime this summer on a new sanctuary, it was announced today by the Rev. Christian J. Thearle, pastor.

The sanctuary is expected to cost $225,000 and will be built at the southern end of the property. It will be built so that as few as possible of the trees on this showplace estate will be disturbed. The church now occupies the former Giddings mansion on the northern end of this property.

Sketches for the sanctuary, drawn by Architect James Hunter and Associates of Boulder, were accepted by the congregation at a recent meeting. The sanctuary will be the first of a four-phase construction program that will ultimately include a new parish education building, fellowship hall and a small chapel.

Construction is expected to be completed in time for the congregation's 75th anniversary celebration next year.

The sanctuary will face Cascade Avenue and will be dramatized by a 60-foot free-standing bell tower. It will seat 385 persons. A two-manual, 30-rank organ and a choir loft will be located in the rear.

The chancel area is to be enclosed by an altar rail on three sides. The free-standing altar is to be constructed of white marble, illuminated by light from a floor-to-ceiling stained glass window at the rear of the chancel.

Modern structures and new materials will be utilized in the construction. A radiant heating system is to extend to the sidewalk in front of the church, keeping the walk clear of snow and ice.

Parking for 30 cars will be provided along the [illegible] the east end of the property.

An administration wing will extend from the northeastern corner of the sanctuary, providing office space for the pastor, assistant pastor and church secretary.

The main sanctuary will contain 4,730 square feet, the office wing and a basement for maintenance only will each have 950 square feet. The balcony will have [illegible] square feet. Total square footage will be [illegible] square feet.

Eventually the administrative wing will be attached [illegible] a new education unit extending along the eastern end of the property.

Plans call for building a fellowship hall at a later date on the northwestern corner of the property in the second phase of the long-range program.

The present home of the church contains a small chapel seating [illegible] persons, plus rooms for [illegible] Sunday School and fellowship. When the new sanctuary is completed, the building will be used exclusively for parish education and fellowship.

Eventually it will make way for an education parlor, library and chapel which will link the proposed fellowship hall on the northwest and the education building on the east.

Hunter, the architect, designed the chapel at Colorado State University and the new campus complex at Fort Lewis A&M, among other churches and public structures throughout the state.

First Lutheran Church, a member of the Lutheran Church in America, was first housed in a hall at the present Utilities Building site. It had several other homes in downtown Colorado Springs, including the present City Auditorium site, be-

ARADCOM Chief Says U.S. Ready for Crisis

America's armed forces are "prepared to respond effectively to all-out nuclear war and to the most probable lesser forms of conflict," the commanding general of the Army Air Defense Command said here Saturday.

"In being so prepared," Lt. Gen. Charles B. Duff said, "our military services have also achieved a considerable bonus of preparedness for other types of conflict, such as large-scale conventional war or a large war in which nuclear weapons are limited to tactical use."

Gen. Duff spoke at the Armed Forces Day luncheon held in the Gen. Palmer Room at the Antlers Hotel. The ARADCOM commander discussed the national strategy of "flexible response" — "meaning that we are prepared to apply the appropriate measure of military force to counter effectively any type of aggression, from insurgency to all-out nuclear war."

By this preparedness, the general said, "we can force our potential enemies to think twice before beginning such aggression. And we contribute strongly to creating deterrence of all degrees of war."

The West Point graduate said President Johnson expressed

Revival of Gold Mining Forecast In Colorado Area

By STEPHEN M. AUG

DENVER (AP) — A $4 million year for silver and a revival of gold mining are predicted for 1964 in Colorado by G. A. (Bud) Franz, the state's deputy mining commissioner.

Franz says the year's silver production will be about $1 million more than the $2,994,912 mined in 1963.

But he added that $4 million was not a very good year, and predicted that this would double in 1965.

Franz's 1964 silver production could be somewhat lower if full production is reached on new mines in the Georgetown area. He added that another strike had been reported near Ouray—but he had received no official word on it.

The activity is the result of the long-range effect of the government's decision two years ago to suspend sales of silver and create a free market for the metal. The price is now about $1.29 an ounce — a high reached a year ago.

Franz explains that it takes time to develop a silver mine fully before production can start. "People in the East think all we have to do is turn a valve or stick a pick in the ground and you start mining gold or silver. But it's not like that — it takes a year or two to develop," he said.

Although there has been very little gold mined in Colorado in recent years, Franz says one

Canada Wants New Flag Without Foreign Symbols

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) —The swirls of national feeling whipping across Canada these days are threatening to blow down the Red Ensign, Canada's flag.

His minority Liberal government has hinted it will resign if Parliament rejects a proposed new design. No one seriously believes the government would step down, but the threat of resignation reflects the storm that the flag issue has caused.

Pearson's campaign is another instance of the quest by many Canadians in recent years for "a distinctive Canadian identity." In less polite terms what the search amounts to is a growing rebellion against the persuasive U.S. economic and cultural influence in Canadian life.

More Hot Lava Pours Down Mt. Etna Slope

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — A stream of glowing hot lava moving down the southern slope of Mt. Etna increased in volume and speed Saturday as a crack in the volcano's central crater steadily widened.

In the path of the lava steam is the village of Biancavilla. The ears of residents were bombarded Friday with violent roars from the two-mile-high volcano.

The population remained calm however, and the Catania Institute of Volcanology said there was no immediate danger from the lava.

Businessman Nabbed In Secret Camera Sale

Leontyne Price Gets Ovation In Atlanta, Ga.

By DON MCKEE

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Leontyne Price, who began her career in a Mississippi church choir, brought her rich soprano to Atlanta and received in her words an "overwhelming response."

Miss Price won prolonged applause during her performance in the Metropolitan Opera's production of "Don Giovanni."

After the final curtain call, exhausted but excited, the Negro singer was besieged by dozens of admirers backstage. She received Dr. and Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr. and several other Negroes in her dressing room.

"I'm so thrilled," she said. "It brought tears to my eyes."

King, Southern integration leader, told the soprano: "You will never know what you did for Atlanta. I was so thrilled at the response. This was a genuine expression of appreciation, and about 95 per cent of the audience was white."

Miss Price told King and his group that she enjoyed her Atlanta debut tremendously.

"It is my first visit but I assure you not my last," she said. She called King "a prince" and said she wanted to write him.

Half an hour after the performance, more than 30 persons waited outside the theater for a glimpse of the soprano whose voice had captivated them.

Miss Price, who had refused to talk with newsmen, declined to give her autograph to the fans.

The audience burst into thunderous and prolonged applause after Miss Price's first lengthy solo in the first act and repeated the acclaim after intermission when the soprano's rare quality obliterated everything else.

It seemed clear that the audience, composed mostly of Atlanta's white elite, agreed for the moment with Miss Price's credo that "singing is the only important thing in the world."

Her appearance in Atlanta underscored the quite integration of cultural activities in the Georgia capital.

Miss Price's previous appearances in the South have been before integrated audiences in her hometown of Laurel, Miss., where she was warmly received.

The cast of "Don Giovanni" was composed of Miss Price, Cesare Siepi, Lisa Della Casa, Laurel Hurley, Franco Ghitti, Justino Diaz, Fernando Corena and Theodor Uppman.

PALISADE, N.J. (UPI) — A record of some kind was set recently by Robert Sullivan, 28, an office worker of Jersey City, N.J., when he rode the initial run of the Sky Ride at Palisades Amusement Park 63 consecutive times for a total of about 5 hours and 45 minutes.

Sullivan's tab for the rides 385 feet over the Hudson River came to $31.50 but, in view of the occasion, the management settled for $3. "I have a great love for heights and aerial rides," said Sullivan.

Building of Dam Forces Move of Oklahoma Town

By LEO R. WELTER

HOCHATOWN, Okla. (UPI)—The roar of giant trucks and caterpillars cracks the mountain stillness where the Choctaw hunted deer and bear.

Down the Mountain Fork River, men and machines rearrange a section of the Kiamichi Mountains and earth and rock give way to the pick ax and tractor blade. Construction crews are building the Broken Bow Dam, a 4,252-foot long, rock-fill structure that will flood 14,200 acres and swallow Hochatown like the mythical continent of Atlantis.

Most everybody has left now but a few familes still linger in this tiny southeast Oklahoma town. The dam will not be finished until 1968 and some of them have children in school. Other residents work on the dam and still others stay because it is hard to leave.

Hochatown, located in McCurtain County near the Oklahoma-Arkansas-Texas border, never was much in size or population. Made up of little people, both Indian and white, there was little protest when rumors began to spread about the dam.

No one liked it, but there was little they could do about it. Those who left took most of Hochatown with them.

Everywhere the remnants of foundations still stand, but the houses are gone—carried off board by board to be reassumbled in another place.

Five Mile Hollow Creek flows into the Mountain Fork at Hochatown and homesites dot its winding banks. Stone fireplaces and the tops of open wells seem out of place in the wilderness created when the people moved.

Worthless leavings at the homesites, however, show that once people lived here in contentment. Rusting hulks of early vintage cars, worn kitchen utensils and broken toys lay scattered about.

Some buildings, like the church, school and general store, still stand.

A. C. Kincaid, operator of Hochatown's general store and its postmaster for more than 40 years, said the post office served "175 families" in the town's heyday.

Kincaid took down his official "U.S. Post Office" sign for good last Dec. 29, but his store is still stocked with everything from wire cutters to Washington State apples. Outside there is a gasoline pump, the only one for miles around.

Hochatown was settled by the Choctaw Indians in the early 1830's. The Choctaws, originally from southeastern Mississippi and southwestern Alabama, ceded their land to the U.S. in the 1811 Treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek and migrated northwest in the famous "Trail of Tears."

In exchange for their land in the Gulf Plains, the Choctaws got most of Southeast Oklahoma. They had their own government, modeled after the U.S. system, until Oklahoma became the 46th state of the Union on Nov. 16, 1907.

Oldtimers tell you the people of Hochatown lived off the land and bootleg liquor. The first white men cleared farms in the area about 1904, just three years before statehood. They hunted and fished and each had his "corn patch" for growing the ingredients for an Indian bread called "tomfulla." Many of the townspeople raised cotton for sale.

Between 1910 and 1922 the town had a cotton gin, telephone exchange and a mill for making barrel staves.

But the community made most of its present reputation on the manufacture of illegal booze during the depression years. Estimates say nearly three fourths of the white population made whisky, their stills hidden in secluded woods and mountain crags.

Only the surveyors know the real meanings of the ribbons, but to the people of Hochatown, they signal the day when the Mountain Fork will creep out of its banks and condemn the community to history.

Few will remember Hochatown in another generation. Cartographers will leave it off maps and it will be dropped from official state and county lists.

But the dead will be remembered. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will have Hochatown's cemetery moved, grave by grave, to a site away from the reservoir.

Compromise on Medicare Is Being Hinted

By JOSEPH D. HUTNYAN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways & Means Committee may be on the verge of producing a medical care program that may be acceptable to both the American Medical Association and those lawmakers who have been fighting for a program financed by Social Security.

The package now before the committee would expand medical care under all federal-state welfare programs. One of its most striking changes would relax the so-called "means test" under the Kerr-Mills program that was established in 1960 to provide health insurance for the aged.

The means test is the test of eligibility all applicants must pass under the program, and some have claimed it is humiliating.

Under the proposed legislation the test of eligibility would be based primarily on income. Those whose income exceeded the maximum allowed still would be eligible for partial benefits.

It would eliminate such controversial requirements as a pauper's oath or forcing an old person to report the income of his children.

The package now before the committee also would broaden the medical benefits of such federal-state programs as old age assistance, aid to dependent children, aid to the blind and aid to the disabled. The additional coverage would be financed out of treasury revenues.

Federal medical payments would be increased to bring the lower-benefit states to a par with the richer ones. Higher benefit states would be encouraged to broaden their present coverage by the promise of extra federal payments.

One administration supporter said he thought the measure came closer to "socialized medicine" than President Johnson's medicare plan. But it appeared to be the kind of compromise that could get around opposition from the American Medical Association.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the ways & means committee, also was reported to be backing the compromise proposal. His support would be essential if the bill is to win approval.

Bard's Birthday Causes Master Book Assault

By LYNN POOLE
The Johns Hopkins University

This year we honor the fourth century of the birth of William Shakespeare. His four C's celebration has produced a master assault by book publishers, magazine editors, radio and TV producers, lecturers, classroom teachers and dinner table philosophers. Little theatres, professional theatres and summer stock companies are including a Shakespeare play amoung reruns of more profitable plays by lesser known playwrights.

A bow to the bard of Avon is certainly his due; his tragedies and comedies have lived longer than any, except Euripides, Aristophanes, Aescnyles and Sophocles, the four ancient Greeks from whom W.S. (and others) borrowed many a plot and bon-mot.

But, while we hail the Elizabethan masttr of drama, we are forgetting another who celebrates his four C's birthday in 1964. And, with permission I would like to say a word about him, on his birthday. He is Galileo Galilei, one of the giants of science of all ages, born in 1564, who lived to the productive old age of 78 before dying blind but still alert in 1642.

Galileo was astronomer, mathematician, physicist, philosopher and without doubt one of the founders of modern experimental science, if not the founder. His contributions are uncountable; his influence on today's life immeasureable.

At the age of 25, already a professor at the University of Pisa, Galileo reasoned, then mathematically plotted the hypothesis that bodies of different weights fall through the air with equal velocities and uniform acceleration. His timid colleagues tapped their hoary beads and called him mad. To prove his point it is claimed that he trudged to the top of the Leaning Tower of Pisa, simultaneously released two objects of different weights which hit the ground at the same moment.

I well remember what an impact this story made on me when I was nine. My curiosity was stimulated and I convinced a friend to climb to the top of our local flat - topped water tank to check on Galileo. I had a small stone. My friend had a large rock. On the count of three we let the weights fall. They pinged and plunked on the gravel below us at the same time. Ergo! Galileo was right. Exhilarated with our success we reported our experiment to our parents, who, instead of complimenting us on our intellectual curiosity tanned our behinds for climbing the tower.

Galileo was 10 years older, nineteen, when he made one of his first great contributions to scientific method and knowledge. Inside the Cathedral of Pisa he saw a holy lamp swinging back and forth in pendulum rhytm. He timed the swing by means of counting his pulse and found that the time of each swing was the same, no matter how far the elamp-pndulum swung in an arc from lft to right. With this he discovered the vital fact of the isochronism of a pendulum — the uniform time, equal time and regular intervals of a pendulum. On this is based many a modern household item and many a space-probe discovery.

He formulated and proved hydrostatic balance, the center of gravity of solid bodies and countless other facts so necessary to modern science. Galileo propounded a theory that physical laws can be stated as mathematical formulas and thereby hasten the development of science.

Again his colleagues were amused. They should have learned better by then, but they didn't. So he had to prove it to them. And by his proof, paved the way for contemporary science, which is truly in essence mathematical. Without theoretical mathematics no one can follow a productive career in science today.

Galileo presupposed many of Isaac Newton's laws of motion. He proved that the path of a projectile is a parabola, not a straight line. In 1609 he made the first true astronomical telescope and immediately opened the way for further vision and understanding of our universe. He discovered that the moon is not silvery and slick; it is made up of mountains, plains and valleys. He saw clearly that the Milky Way is made up of numberless stars. On January 7, 1610 he discovered three satellites rotating around Jupiter. He studied Venus, investigated sun spots and explained many things about Mars.

In fact, his fertile mind spilled forth so many new facts that he caused an uproar and clamor so loud that he left Pisa and went to Florence. At this time he confirmed the beliefs set forth by Copernicus that the Sun, not the earth, is the center of our universe, and that all the planets revolve around the sun. This was too much! He was called to Rome and sternly admonished, told to stop teaching such religious heresy. But, he continued. So, he was called to Rome again, and, through the convincing methods of inquisition used by authorities in those days, Galilto was forced to deny the Copernican theory of the universe. This was in 1633. He bowed before authority. He denied the theory. But, many claim that as he bowed before his clerical judges, he was heard to murmur under his breath "E pur si muove." (Nevertheless it does move).

After a brief, but unpleasant imprisonment, Galileo was released and allowed to live in a small village not far from Florence. After he became blind he worked with increasing urgency because there was so little time and so much to do. Already his life span was greater than most men of his time. He died at the age of seventy-eight, in 1642.

Hist last book "Dialogues Concerning Two New Sciences" was published in 1638. Today, we might well excerpt the wor "two" from that book, and consider how fortunate we are that these two men were born with such minds that they enrich our lives four hundred years later.

Armless Housewife Gives Birth to Boy

CARTHAGE, Ill. (AP) — Carthage College is moving to Kenosha, Wis., this summer and the males are taking along their 2½-ton excuse for kissing girls.

For 51 years, college tradition has had it that coeds caught sitting on a large chunk of granite situated on the campus were obliged to submit a quick, but firm, buss.

Today, some 50 fraternity men equipped with a wrecker will hoist the 2½-ton rock on a truck and head north to the new campus on the shores of Lake Michigan.

Scientists Report on Large Variety of Heart Actions

The cardiac conduction system of animals ranging from insects to man, came under the scrutiny of scientists from many countries at the launching of The New York Academy of Sciences' Conference on Comparative Cardiology. All sessions of the three - day conference will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City.

Dr. R. L. DeHaan (Carnegie Institute of Washington, Baltimore, Md.) described the development of specialized cells within the heart which generate and conduct the electrical changes which make the heart beat. He told the conference that these cells could be distinguished under the microscope in human embryos only six weeks old, and in chick embryos only seven days old.

He presented evidence that "a limited number of cells exhibiting pacemaker properties (the ability to initiate the heart beat) are present in the heart" even earlier.

How electrical changes in the pacemaker are initiated, and what factors influence the activity of these cells, continues to intrigue various researchers. Dr. Ernest Page (Harvard Medical School, Boston) discussed the application to these events of the theory which recently won the Nobel prize for Prof. A. L. Hodgkin and Prof. A. F. Huxley. This theory, which describes what happens when a nerve fiber transmits an impulse, may also explain how the specialized pacemaker cells transmit their signals. The electrical impulse which gives the heart its stimulus may stem from an interchange of sodium and potassium ions through the cell membrane.

The signal moves along the surface of the cell as the membrane permits more sodium ions to pass through. It is still not known what drives the ions across the cell membrane, or what prompts the increase in membrane permeability.

Dr. H. H. Hecht (Department of Medicine, University of Utah, Salt Lake City) defined the pacemaker as "a cell or group of cells of rhythmically excitable tissue." He described experiments in which cells of the cardiac pacemaker underwent changes in their electrical characteristics as a result of changes in temperature, potassium ion concentration, and other factors, thereby altering the heart rate.

Dr. Hecht went on to say that the pacemaker region is structurally quite different from heart muscle in general. The membranes of the pacemaker region offer little resistance to the passage of an electric current. He noted that rhythmic activity begins in the embryonic chick heart before the heart becomes supplied with nerves. Such activity is present in the hearts of insects, lobsters, mollusks, fishes, frogs, reptiles, mammals and birds.

In some animals it can operate in the absence of obvious sodium and potassium interchange. Automatic rhythmic activity occurs in the hearts of the lower forms of animals and in the hearts of higher animals early in their development, without the presence of a specialized conducting system.

Dr. F. V. McCann (Dartmouth Medical School, Hanover, New Hampshire) reported that the simple tubular heart of the moth has a myocardium of striated muscle, as do the hearts of other animals and man. It is a primitive organ not separated into chambers, and pumps first in one direction and then in the other; there is no specialized conducting system.

Other researchers described the "generator and wiring system" in the hearts of turkeys, frogs and turtles. Dr. E. N. Moore (University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia) said that in turkey hearts the signal can be "blocked" much the same as in mammalian hearts. Dr. P. F. Cranefield (Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Bronx, N.Y.) said that the hearts of frogs and turtles behave much like those of mammals, insofar as signal transmission is concerned.

Irregular heart beats, which are often associated with serious heart disease in man, may be of little significance in some domestic animals, according to Dr. J. W. Buchanan (University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia).

Horses with atrial fibrillation — a disorder in which a portion of the heart quivers rapidly, but does not beat — are often able to do light work for years. Although they do not recover from this condition spontaneously, a normal heart beat can often be restored in these animals by the use of drugs. Thoroughbreds treated in this manner have even returned to racing and performed well. Large dogs with atrial fibrillation commonly live for months before they show signs of heart failure. Medium - sized dogs show signs of heart failure at the onset of such arrhythmia. Atrial fibrillation is never observed in small dogs.

At the panel discussion of heart sounds and murmurs, which brought the first day's session to a close, Dr. D. F. Patterson and co-workers (University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia) reported that four heart sounds are frequently heard in normal horses.

In other animals, including man, two or at the most three sounds are heard. Furthermore, various murmurs which in other animals are associated with disease of the heart, are frequently heard in normal horses. It is hoped that such studies may help physicians to better understand what events in the cardiac cycle produce the various heart sounds and murmurs in man.

Cochairmen of the Conference on Comparative Cardiology are Drs. D. K. Detweiler (School of Veterinary Medicine, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia) and Hans H. Hecht (University of Utah College of Medicine, Salt Lake City).

The Conference on Comparative Cardiology is one of more than 20 major scientific conferences which will be sponsored by The New York Academy of Sciences this year. The Academy now has nearly 18,000 member-scientists who reside in all 50 states and 84 countries.

Salvation Army Week Begins With Open House

The event from 1:30 to 4 p.m. will include a conducted tour of the facilities. Refreshments will be served to the visitors.

The week of national observance concludes next Sunday.

Coffee and doughnuts served with a cheerful smile and a "God bless you" have been familiar symbols of the Salvation Army since World War I according to Major W. J. Mahy, local SA officer.

The major explained that it all began when a "brave band of Army lassies" were among the first of non-medical personnel of their sex to arrive at the front.

The women were full of enthusiastic plans to surprise the soldiers with freshly baked pies and cakes, Maj. Mahy said, but discovered that no ovens were available, and the only baking ingredients to be found were flour and lard.

"The girls' faith and resourcefulness came to the rescue," he said, explaining they decided doughnuts were the answer.

Improvising cooking utensils from spent shell cases, old wine bottles and the tops of tin cans, the women started the first of the Salvation Army's doughnut assembly lines that were to become a regular and welcome sight to all America's fighting men.

The Salvation Army continues to serve on the home front in the war against human misery and want, Maj. Mahy said, citing its shelters for homeless men, maternity homes and hospitals for unwed mothers, the Red Shield mobile disaster units, Evangeline residence hotels for young businesswomen away from home, and the countless free meals, emergency lodgings and counseling sessions offered each year to the hungry and homeless.

"This special week presents us all with an opportunity to become better acquainted with the great number of vital community services operated by this Army of the Helping Hand," Maj. Mahy said.

"The Sword of the American Revolution" was a name given to George Washington.

FAMILY POLITICS

BOISE, Idaho (UPI)—Idaho Gov. Robert E. Smylie, senior governor in the country in time of service, told a youth legislature here that the art of political machination is also a household tool.

Encouraging the youths that there is nothing "dark and mysterious" about politics, Smylie said: "I can assure you that when my family begins to move toward the making of a family decision, it is political machinery that they invoke in order to persuade me to have their way."

Your Outdoors

By MARY SHIRER

For the Pikes Peak Group of the Colorado Mountain Club

TOMORROW IS TODAY

It is said that a lobster when left high and dry among rocks, has no energy to work his way back to the sea, instead he waits for the sea to come to him and if it does not, he remains where he is until he dies. It would take only the slightest effort for him to reach the waves which are tossing within a yard from him. This is true with about half the human race. They get stranded on rocks figuratively speaking and calmly wait for some grand wave of good fortune to come their way and let them ride pleasantly and calmly without a jolt to some easy place in life. But life is different, we must go out and face the waves of the ocean, no difference how rough it may be. The sea gulls ride the rough waves never hunting for the smooth ones. When you watch them you think surely they will be swallowed up, but up they come to the surface again. Wild creatures of the air must face all conditions of weather. They must face whatever comes and storms do lash them and many perish but in their lives, it is the command to leave for their journey of migration and not tomorrow. The little animals that burrow in for the winter do so today.

The human race generally waits until it gets cold before doing anything about winter but the wild animal starts finding winter home during the warm weather and lays in provisions. There is a wise saying: "Never put off till tomorrow what you ought to do today." Tomorrow never comes, it is always today. It must be today that we make our preparations for all we do. Those opportunities come today and if we put them off tomorrow it does not come for that day will be today. Tomorrow never comes, never was born. It is just a vision over the hills.

We must live today. Tomorrow is like a light shining in the dark of the night which the traveler sees but never reaches. The captain at sea must not put off the safety of his vessel tomorrow. Sometimes we drift along merrily consoling ourselves with the thought that something can be done tomorrow and what an awakening we have next day comes and we are confronted with today. Battles must be fought today for the enemy is preparing for tomorrow and will take you unaware. Our early Pioneers had to fight their todays. Their safety and what they built had to be done on their todays. Today is ours, so what do we fear? We should treat it kindly that it may stay with us. Our cares are today and all our joys are today. In other words, our life is today. The sun shines over the mountains and the day bids fair. We live for today, crowding what we can in the way of work and play during those brief hours. Tomorrow is just another today and is keeping promises for us that are good and true. It may be the best yet, who knows?

Cuba Worried About Shortage of Water

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — The regime of Fidel Castro admits it is worried about an acute water shortage in Havana.

Faustino Perez, head of the Cuban Water Resources Institute, acknowledged government concern Friday but added, "This problem has been inherited and was not created by the revolution."

Air Cadets To Go Army, Navy In Blue Attire

Commanded by selected cadets from the Class of 1965, the undergraduates will receive thorough indoctrination and training with major components of the Department of Defense.

In addition to visiting Army and Navy installations, the cadets will receive instruction from the Air Defense Command, Air Force Logistics Command, Air Force Systems Command, Military Air Transport Service, Strategic and Tactical Air Commands.

In two groups, the cadets will leave the Academy beginning June 7.

From the Alameda and Long Beach Naval Stations in California, cadets will "cruise" on ships ranging from aircraft carriers to swift destroyers. Ships to be hosts include the carriers Coral Sea, Yorktown, and Hornet, and destroyers Henry B. Wilson, Perkins, John A. Bole, John W. Thompson, Taussig, Lofberg, Floyd B. Parks, and Hull.

At Ft. Benning, Ga., the Army will demonstrate the capabilities of the modern Infantryman.

Cadets are also scheduled to fly an operational combat type sortie with combat crews from TAC, ADC or SAC.

Enfield Blasts Romer Over Backing Charge

"I am shocked that Mr. Romer should bring this up in a 3rd Congressional District party election.

"I want it specifically denied that I support Rockefeller-Powers or any other national slate of candidates."

Enfield said he would back no candidate for national committeeman or president, adding: "The function of a congressional chairman is to back a congressman, and I would back Rep. J. Edgar Chenoweth if elected."

Romer and Enfield will vie for the chairmanship at a Wednesday night reorganization meeting in Rocky Ford.

The Republican county chairmen and vice chairmen in the district will have a vote plus state senators and representatives in the district, plus "bonus members" of the Republican State Central Committee.

Romer, who has been district chairman for the past six years, says he is opposed to a Rockefeller-Powers ticket and is for Denver oilman John King for national committeeman, a supporter of Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., for the GOP presidential nomination.

broadcast was on a new short wave frequency.

There has been no clue to the American's identity, the place his broadcasts originate or the reason they are made. But Cuban monitors judge that "his Spanish indicates he lived in Cuba."

Regardless, he speaks Spanish with a decided American accent, and possibly was one of the many Americans who lived in Cuba before Premier Fidel Castro came to power.

Reports that seemed to originate in New York swept into Miami that Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, one time Castro ally against Batista, has landed in Cuba to spearhead landings by four more refugee groups.

Menoyo is leader of the Second Escambray Front Organization, which in turn is affiliated with Alpha 66, the People's Revolutionary Movement (MRP) and the Exile Students' Federation.

100,000 Men Launch Desert Strike Games

cise to its conclusion May 30.

Motorists traveling along U.S. 66, which crosses the exercise area, may catch glimpses of men and weapons.

Veterans may see some units of their old outfits like the 1st and 2nd armored divisions, known respectively as "old Ironsides" and "Hell on Wheels," and the 101st Airborne Division.

Also to be seen are the "red Devil" 5th Mechanized Division and jet fighters and reconnaissance planes from the 9th and 12th Air Forces.

The U.S. Strike Command created this situation:

Calonia and Nezona are disputing water rights to the Colorado River, which flows through the exercise area.

Reports indicate Nezona will try to seize Parker and Davis Dams on the river.

Adams, who directs both sides, knows the winner, but he will develop the exercise under semicontrolled conditions that will give opposing commanders opportunity for initiative.

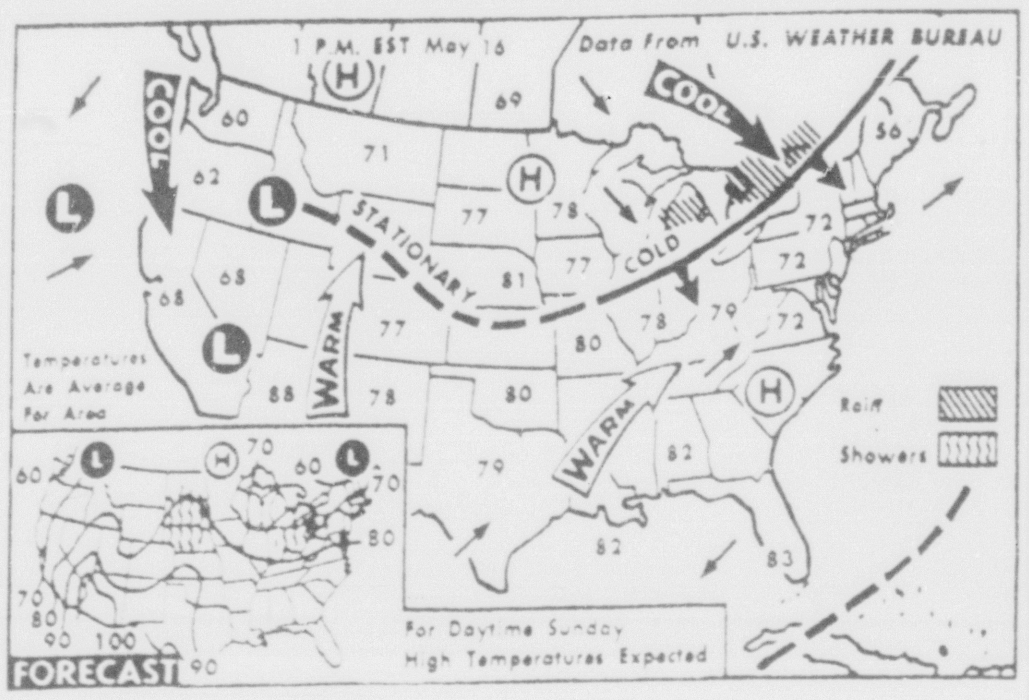
The command's aim is to smooth out coordination and evaluate tactics.

The exercise area is rugged, barren desert, studded with jagged mountain ranges a mile or more high.

There are sunseared dry lakes and snow-patched crags. The temperature ranges from near freezing to 100 degrees-plus.

Both sides have a common enemy: poisionous or just unnerving reptiles and insects.

Gila monsters, black widows, scorpions, centipedes and coral snakes live here with the more familiar sidewinder rattlesnake.



WEATHER BUREAU FORECAST — Showers will be scattered in parts of the central and northern Plains today as well as along the lower Great Lakes and northern New England. Elsewhere fair to partly cloudy skies will prevail. It will be cooler over New England and the northern part of the middle Atlantic states as well as over the Pacific northwest and northern Rockies. It will be warmer elsewhere.

Twin Boys Times Three Equals Six Individuals

By ALEX LAGGIS

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (NEA) — One of the nation's most unusual sets of twins, the six Murrays of Old Mission Peninsula are growing up and now even their mother admits she is glad that they are all boys.

Mrs. David R. Murray II explained: "At first I thought that it would have been nice if one of the sets had been girls. But now I wouldn't have it any other way. It's especially handy when it comes to buying clothes—and not nearly as expensive. By the time the youngest twins (Evan and Chris, 4½) get them, we have received our money's worth.

"The eldest set of twins, Carl and David, 9, are now third graders at Old Mission Peninsula Elementary School near Traverse City, while brothers Pete and John, 8, are in the second grade.

While the prospect of having that many similar faces around might pose a problem to less hardy teachers, the youngsters' instructors at Old Mission Elementary has had more than average experience in dealing with lookalike twins. At one time several years ago, hte school had no less than 12 sets of twins enrolled at the same time.

The Murrays' two eldest sets of twins are now all about the same height (56 inches) and they so resemble each other in appearance that they are often mistaken for quadruplets, their mother said.

"However, when you get to know them as we have, you realize that each one is so different that we treat them as six boys instead of three sets of twins," she added.

This year the two sets attending school are split up in different classrooms, although this wasn't the case last year.

"We like it better this way," Mrs. Murray said.

This past winter, the twins' favorite sport became skiing. They took to the slopes with great enthusiasm, even the 4½-year-olds.

The twins live in the same farmhouse in which their father grew up. Murray is head of the social studies department at the National Arts Academy at Interlochen. During the summer he does what almost everyone else on the peninsula does—he tends the cherry crop.

She was also a member of the Focus Club.

Surface winds during the afternoon averaged about 25 miles per hour with gusts up to 40. At 10,000 to 12,000 feet, the Weather Bureau said, winds averaged from 40 to 45 mph.

Despite the fact that the mountains were almost invisible from downtown Colorado Springs at 6 p.m. Saturday, the Manitou Springs Police Department reported at 7:30 p.m. that the air was clear and free of dust.

The Weather Bureau said that gusty winds and possible blowing dust can be expected in the area this afternoon, with no moisture in sight for today.

Climate Much Better for Civil Rights

By STEVEN GERSTEL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ten years ago the omnibus civil rights bill now halfway through congressional passage would have been written off as a wild dream.

The House would never have passed it and the Senate would never have considered it.

Nor would any president have suggested it.

In 1954, when the Supreme Court ruled out segregation in public schools, Congress still was three years from passing its first civil rights bill since the post-Civil War days.

The 1957 bill, guided through the Senate by then Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson, was limited to voting. Yet even today, Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., insists it would not have passed if there could have been more debate.

Again in 1960, an election year, Congress passed a civil rights bill, also devoted to ending discrimination in voting among Negroes.

Yet, within the last several months, the House passed a civil rights bill which incorporates many of the proposals rejected in other years and touches on almost every form of discrimination.

Why the sudden change? Why, after years of tailing the Supreme Court and even the executive branch, has Congress decided to leapfrog ahead in civil rights matters?

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., chairman of the house judiciary committe who helped father the civil rights bill of 1964, said there has been considerable change in the attitude of the House members.

But Celler said the change has not been gradual over the past 10 years. In fact, he said, the change came in "the last year or so" after the widespread demonstrations and southern reaction to the Negro drive.

"The mere fact that the House passed a comprehensive civil rights bill," he said, "indicates considerable change."

Celler said "a good many of the southerners realized the die is cast."

"The events, the incidents in Danville and Birmingham, the bombings, the murders, the sit-ins and the very horrendous opposition among the southerners," he said, "has pricked the conscience of the nation . . . ."

The change in attitude also has been evident in the Senate. The civil rights bill is still under debate, but the advocates have never been so well-organized and confident of eventual passage.

Thurmond, a member of the southern bloc, fighting the civil rights bill, said, "the complexion of the Senate has changed greatly" since he was sworn in 1955.

At the time of his arrival, Thurmond said, there was a "rather balanced conservative-liberal Senate" which has now changed to "an overwhelmingly liberal Senate."

"The more liberal the Senate becomes, the more sentiment there is for civil rights" the South Carolina senator added.

Speaking before an audience of some 250 civilian and military persons, Gen. Duff presented a review of the vast forces of men and weapons which the country has both on alert and on call.

"Our military forces are not designed to provide us with a guaranteed, immediate, adequate response to any variation of the wide spectrum of possible aggression, for to do so would pose serious cost prob- ble aggression., for to do so would pose serious cost problems," the general said.

"Rather," he pointed out, "our objective has been to be able to respond effectively to both the most dangerous and the most probable forms of attack."

The most dangerous, Gen. Duff said, would be a surprise all-out nuclear attack.

Following a listing of the highlights of America's capability to counter such an onslaught, the general said he thought "it is clear that we could retaliate devastatingly against an enemy who should be so ill-advised as to launch such an attack upon us, even though the attack were without warning."

"Our enemies are well aware of our counter-attack capabilities," he said, "although they too have a powerful nuclear attack capability, they know that to use it would result in their destruction. This has given rise to the situation we call mutual nuclear deterrence."

Gen. Duff defined the most probable kinds of aggression as "one or more limited or small wars" or "some form of insurgency or both."

On limited war, the general pointed out that "the danger of small war escalation into full-scale nuclear war makes prevention or settlement of these smaller conflicts a must."

"For this reason," he said, "our strategy and our military preparations call for the prompt and selective application of the correct amount of military force required to cope quickly with such a war."

Gen. Duff said about one-third of the country's 2.7 million men currently under arms are deployed in strategic locations overseas where they can react quickly to aggression or the threat of such. The bulk of the remaining two-thirds is in strategic reserve, ready to be quickly shifted to trouble spots, either as reinforcements for Amer- as trouble shooters in areas where there are no U.S. forces deployed.

— A 100 per cent increase in the number of nuclear weapons available in the strategic alert forces.

— A 75 per cent increase in airlift capability.

gold property near Victor in Teller County is being reactivated.

The mine — known as the El Paso — was opened about 1900 during the heyday of gold mining in the Cripple Creek-Victor area. Franz says that if the new developers plan to produce gold profitably they will have to install a mill to refine it.

He said the mine is being developed by a Canadian firm.

Oil shale — It will be developed 10 years earlier than was first thought possible. Franz predicts some operations by the end of next year.

Molybdenum — a $20 million program by American Metals Climax to produce 5,000 tons a day in Clear Creek County will push forward the development of this ore.

Uranium — Production remains steady and should continue at present levels at least until 1970.

Springs Players Win Sectional Bridge Contest

Two local bridge players have defeated Denver title holders for the men's pairs championship in the Colorado Springs sectional tournament in the Antlers Hotel.

Richard L. Sabin, 1028 E. Boulder St., and Harry Bashore, 2633 Summit Dr., defeated a field of 80 players.

Ice water was served Saturday night as tense players filled the Terrace Room of the hotel at the start of the second session of an open pairs contest.

Fifth - three tables started at the first session and 26 qualified to continue. They were still playing at press time. Two side games were also played Saturday.

Today the tournament, which began Friday, will end after a two - session masters pairs and side games.

The player with the highest aggregate match point score after both sessions will be the winner.

Harold Menzel of Denver will defend his Colorado Springs masters title with Hal Ashley of Aurora, director of a bridge club there. Menzel won three championships several weeks ago at the Oil City sectional tournament in Casper, Wyo.

He and Marvin Thomsic of Denver were defending men's pairs champs before they were defeated by the Colorado Springs combination.

A Denver mother and daughter, Sylvia Berkowitz and Judy Axelrad, are the new women's pairs title holders.

U.N. Troops Will Fire If Cyprus Forces Attack

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI)—The United Nations Command Saturday for the first time ordered its peace-keeping troops to fire if necessary to protect Cypriots from attacks by other Cypriots.

Previously, U.N. soldiers were empowered to shoot only in self defense.

The new "get-tough" policy coincided with the start of the harvest season in boundary areas where repeated fighting has erupted between the warring Greek and Turkish communities.

"We've tried persuasion and it doesn't work," a senior U.N. official told UPI. "So now we'll tighten the screws a little."

The U.N. has informed both sides that its troops will open fire immediately if any shooting is directed against the harvesters even if the lives of U.N. personnel are not endangered.

The U.N. has become increasingly convinced that it must take a more active role to end the civil strife which has turned this island into a battlefield for the past five months.

Galo Plaza, the Ecuadorean diplomat appointed by U.N. Secretary General Thant as his personal political representative here, was reported to have given details of the new tough policy to both President Makarios, leader of the Greek Community, and Vice President Fazil Kutchuk, head of the Turkish minority.

Gonzalez Makes Tennis Comeback

CLEVELAND (AP)—Pancho Gonzalez made a successful start on a new comeback campaign Saturday night by defeating Andres Gimeno of Spain 6-2, 15-13 in a professional tennis tournament here.

In double play, Gonzalez and Alex Olmedo of Los Angeles defeated Luis Ayala of Chile and Gimeno 6-3, 6-1.

Science for You

By BOB BROWN

PROBLEM: The Open - and - Shut Pipe.

NEEDED: A large diameter soda straw and a sharp razor blade.

DO THIS: Cut the straw at about the middle. Flatten one end of one piece of the straw. Arrange the pieces as shown and blow through the straw. Arrange the pieces as shown and blow through the straw. A musical tone will be heard. Remove your finger from the end of the lower straw and blow again. The new musical tone will be an octave higher.

Try different lengths for the lower straw.

WHY? This is a condition of resonance (look up the word) of an air column in a pipe as in organ pipes or other wind musical instruments.

The air column in the closed tube vibrates a maximum amount at the open end (antinode) and none at the closed end (node). In the open tube there is maximum vibration at each end (antinode) with a node between them. The wavelength in the closed tube is two times that in the open tube. Therefore, the frequency in the closed tube is one half that in the open tube.

Health Hazards Lurk in Plantlife Forms

Most people are aware of the ordinary dangers that face them in the Colorado vacationland during summer months, but few are those who recognize the hazards which are not so commonplace, says T. I. Miller, director of safety for the City of Colorado Springs.

The trees, plants and flowers which are commonly found in gardens and yards can include some species which are the source of poison. They are particularly dangerous to children who are prone to put the attractive berries and leaves in their mouths, Miller says.

It is reported that the common jimson weed contains a tempting nectar and attractive fruit which is a deadly poison and which is probably the most common child - poisoning plant.

The berries of the bittersweet bush or vine are dangerous if eaten because of the powerful effect they have on the nervous system.

Beans from the castro oil plant are dangerous if eaten, five of them can prove fatal if eaten by a child. Digitalis, a powerful heart stimulant, is found in the foxglove as well as in other plants, while a heart sedative is found in the monkshood or wolfsbane. Both are deadly if taken in strong doses.

The foliage, roots and seeds of delphiniums or larkspur contain an alkaloid which is extremely dangerous if eaten. Various parts of the American holly, nightshade, and the lily of the valley are highly poisonous, Miller states.

Cyanide is a deadly poison and is found in the bark, leaves, fruit and flowers of the cherry laurel; the leaves and seeds of the cherry, plum, pear, apricot, and apple contain prussic acid which can also be dangerous, he said.

The leaves and twigs of boxwood are dangerous if chewed; the leaves of rhubarb must not be eaten, only the stalks. Mushrooms are divided into edible varieties and the acutely poisonous varieties, and if you are not absolutely certain which is which, Miller advises leaving all of them alone.

A house plant usually called "dumb cane" contains a highly caustic juice which can seriously burn the mouth if the stalks are bitten into.

Even certain varieties of morning glories have seeds which cause hallucinations if eaten, Miller says. Poison ivy, poison oak, and poison sumac are poisonous to the skin if touched.

The insecticides and sprays used on plants are also a source of danger to small children. The cans and other containers of such sprays should be kept out of the reach of children. The little tots should not be allowed in the vicinity while spray is being applied, or immediately after, Miller says.

TO STUDY ABROAD — Colorado College history Professor Bentley Gilbert and four students do preliminary research prior to leaving for England where they will spend the summer doing detailed investigation at the University of Sheffield and in nearby libraries. CC Students To Study in England

Four Colorado College students will spend the summer in England doing research and study at the University of Sheffield and neighboring libraries.

Accompanied by history Prof. Bentley B. Gilbert, the students also will attend university lectures and carry on course work. If their work is of acceptable caliber, they will receive academic credit at Colorado College for their summer's efforts.

The plan, an innovation at the independent liberal arts college this year, is to initiate undergraduates into research methods of study using original documents.

The students will live at the university. According to Prof. Gilbert, the research will be in the field of English political, social, and economic institutions. Arrangements have been made to give the students access to the collection of letters of Edmund Burke and the Marquis of Rockingham in Sheffield and to the papers of the Dukts of Devonshire at the nearby county seat of Chatsworth.

"We believe our students will benefit measurably by doing independent research under conditions similar to those encountered by the mature scholar," said Professor Gilbert, who has himself done extensive writing and study on the British welfare state. He holds the PhD from the University of Wisconsin.

The group will go by air from New York accompanied by Dr. Gilbert on June 23, spend eight days in London sight-seeing, and then proceed to Sheffield, returning to this country on Aug. 18.

Fishermen Claim Seeing Serpent

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Crewmen of a New Bedford fishing boat have reported sighting what they said was a sea serpent.

"At first we thought it was a whale," Alf Wilhelmsen said Thursday, "and we started out after it. But when we got close enough, we could see it wasn't a whale."

The crew said the creature was at least 50 feet long and weighed 35 to 40 tons. It had a blow hole on top of the head, but the head was described as resembling an alligator and it rose about 26 feet above the water. It's body, the crewmen said, had several humps.

The creature was spotted about 30 miles east southeast of Round Shoals buoy off Nantucket. The weather was good and the sea calm.

Federal Tax Tips

By ROGER E. WARD
Administrative Representative
Internal Revenue Service

TAXABILITY OF PRIZES AND AWARDS: Prizes and awards are generally taxable and the fair market value must be included in gross income on tax returns. Examples of prizes and awards which are reportable include items received from radio and television giveaway shows, contests, door prizes, bingo, raffles, lotteries and sweepstakes.

Shares of stock, building lots, merchandise, and vacation trips to luxury resort areas received by employees, salesmen, dealers, corporation officers, and others are taxable too. These awards are usually received in connection with sales contests and promotion programs. I wish to emphasize that the fair market value of the trips, services, or merchandise received is the amount to be included as taxable income. This applies even if the recipient disposes of such items by gift, or otherwise. Where a taxpayer does not accept an award, its value does not have to be included in taxable income.

Although taxpayers generally are aware that cash awards are taxable, the Internal Revenue Service is becoming concerned over misunderstanding by taxpayers who receive noncash incentive awards and who have either omitted or understated their value for Federal income tax purposes. An enforcement program designed to increase taxpayer compliance in the prize area is already in effect. Taxpayers desiring further information about taxable awards should contact the local office at 636-5171.

WITHHOLDING AND SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES: Employers liable for income tax withheld and social security taxes in excess of $100 for the month of April must place such taxes in a depository. The deadline for doing so is May 15, 1964, and Form 450 must be used for this purpose. Deposits must be made in local authorized banks or Federal Reserve Banks.

REVENUE ACT OF 1964: New tax forms, instructions, and publications based on the reduced withholding rates and other provisions of the Revenue Act of 1964 are now available at the local office. (Employer's Tax Guide) (1040-ES Supplement).

BUBBLES

NEW YORK (UPI) — To best retain the bubble and sparkle of adding champagne, serve it in deep tulip-shaped glasses.

Champagne should not be served icy cold. If it is, the delicate bouquet becomes locked in, preventing a full appreciation of the distinctive taste, reports Mme. Jacques Bollinger, head of a French champagne firm.

County Residents Get Higher Pension Checks

New figures, released by the Social Security Administration, show that the larger incomes that El Paso County residents have been enjoying over the years are now producing additional dividends for them.

They are paying off in the form of better - than - average pension checks.

These checks, which are going to retired workers and their families, reflect their annual earnings furing a span of years prior to retirement. Because earnings were greater, the contributions to the pension fund were also greater.

Just how the local area compares with others in this respect is brought out in the official report, which contains data for every county in the nation, as of the beginning of this year.

It shows that checks to El Paso County residents are running higher, on the average, than are those going to people in most other parts of the United States.

As of January 1st, payments to local recipients were at the rate of $796 per year, as against $794 in the rest of the United States. In the State of Colorado it was $783.

The aggregate amount reaching the local area was over $9,150,000 in the past year. It went to 11,495 retired workers, disabled workers and their wives, children and parents.

The amount has grown, year by year, to the point where it is now of a size to be reckoned with in the local economy.

By comparison, going back three years, there were then only 8,585 recipients. They collected a total of $6,496,000.

The number of people eligible for pension payments has increased since that time because of an easing of the rules governing disability and because additional groups of workers have qualified, by virtue of a broadening of coverage.

Today, there are more than 19 million people in the United States who are receiving monthly checks through Social Security. They get over $16 billion a year.

Further expansion in the size of pensions has been proposed. The idea is to raise benefits in all categories and to pay for the increase by a hike in payroll taxes.

If approved, it will be the first general increase in six years.

Palmer Student Becomes an Eagle Scout

David Irving Middlemist received his Eagle Scout Badge at special ceremonies Wednesday evening at the Rotary Club Scout Hut. He has been a member of Cub Pack 40, Troop 40, and Explorer Post 40, sponsored by the West Side and Manitou Rotary Club.

He is a senior at Palmer High and active in many school organizations. He has already received his God and Country award from the First Presbyterian Church, where he is prominent in Youth activities.

Cadets Destined To Make Mark On Air Force

Judging from early performances, members of the Air Force Academy Class of 1967 (Freshmen) are destined to make quite a mark on the Air Force as their career continue.

During their final week as "Doolies" (prior to their official acceptance into the Cadet Wing), the class exhibited an interesting combination of energy and ability.

Cadet noon formations on two successive days were highlighted by the appearance of craft from the Class of '67 "air force". Both planes carried a similar message, "Go '67".

A later gesture, however, showed the soon - to - be - sophomores have a serious side. Despite the fact that Fourth Classmen draw only $10 a month spending money, the class collected $1,000 for activities during the final week before acceptance.

Although the fund was originally intended strictly for use by '67, the 4th Class dance representatives had a better idea.

Under the guidance of Cadets Carl McPherson, Lisbon, Ohio, and Stephen Rondell, Weisbaden AB, Germany, the dance reps came up with the plan to use the money to aid two very worthwhile causes.

A total of $500 will go to the educational fund of the Air Force Aid Society, $300 to the annual Labor Day Holiday from Danger carnival.

The money was presented this week to Capt. D. L. Mann, Personal Affairs and Family Services officer, and S. Sgt. W. T. Kranovitch, NCOIC, of the unit.

NO MORE GUESSING

ANSONIA, Ohio (AP) — Thanks to a newly wired fire map, Ansonia's 24-man volunteer fire department has become more efficient.

The map, which shows 600 properties in the department's bailiwick, required 4,800 feet of wire and 300 bulbs.

Fire Chief Garold Oswald said before the map was installed, "Whoever got to the station first took the truck and the rest guessed where the fire was."

TOP GUNNER — Sgt. Charlie Carter Jr., is congratulated by Lt. Col. W. H. Stites, 1st Battalion, 77th Armor, commander, on being gunner of the most accurate crew in the battalion's recent Army Training Test at Fort Irwin, Calif. Red Cross Chapter to Hold Dinner Meeting

The Pikes Peak Chapter of the American Red Cross (a United Fund Agency) will hold its annual dinner meeting Friday at the Ft. Carson Officer's Club. Featured speaker will be Dr. John B. Fitz of Miles City, Montana.

Dr. Fitz, a world traveler, writer of poetry and songs, has a national reputation as an after-dinner speaker, as well as an impressive record of educational achievements with no less than five degrees.

The last degree was doctor of divinity, gained after many years of varied experience.

This included 10 years as chaplain of the Wisconsin State Hospital for the mentally infirm, four terms as the director of the Chamber of Commerce of Miles City, Mont., 15 years as director of the Rod and Gun Club of that city, and an active Rotarian. He has had a 25 year period of volunteer service with the Red Cross and is presently a member of the National Board of Governors.

A recent letter from the speaker states that "I will likely use the subject 'All That Glitters' but goes on to say that he will probably not stay with it anyway.

Facilities of the club will be available before and after dinner which will start at 6:45 p.m. All persons who donated to the United Fund are members of the Red Cross and eligible to attend this annual affair. Reservations must be made by Monday by calling the Chapter House at 632-3563.

Illegal Items Sometimes Sent by Mail

Most people look forward with pleasant anticipations from day to day to the arrival of the mailman. Ordinarily, whatever he has in his bag is welcome. But sometimes — and to most everyone's regret — this is not so, for on rare occasions he may leave something that is thoroughly unappreciated and unwanted.

Pornographic materials find their way to people's homes through devious channels," says Postmaster Robert H. Wardwell. In rare instances, they are ordered and therefore expected, but in most cases, the addressee is as surprised at their arrival as is anyone else.

This is because the purveyors of obscenity use high school yearbooks, rosters of civic and school clubs, rented lists of people who have done legitimate business by mail and even obituaries to compile their catalog of victims.

The most effective means open to the recipient to keep unwanted matter out of his mail box is to submit what he receives to his postmaster. Ordinarily, the patron can do very little by himself, but in cooperation with the Postal Service he can sometimes accomplish a great deal.

Conversely, the Postal Service can do very little without the help of the patron, but together they can do much.

Obviously, every patron who objects to use of the mails for transmittal of pornographic materials should be constantly and fully aware of what comes to his home, Wardwell said. He should also feel free to put what he objects to into the hands of his postmaster. While these things are being done, it is hoped that the complainants will avoid the kinds of emotionalism which result in cries for censorship. The problem of controlling pornography is an eternal one, and it can never be improved by giving postal officials discretionary control over either delivery or destruction of mail matter, however objectionable to them it may be, he added.

If you have questions or suggestions regarding the control of pornography, call the postmaster at 632-8841.

MEMPHIS (AP)—Mrs. Spencer Ellis was fast asleep when she was awakened by the sound of women's voices in her house.

Miss Joanna Jolly, chairman of the Foreign Language Department at Wasson High School, is one of 50 U.S. teachers selected to attend Bradley University's Summer Spanish Institute in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico.

The Institute, which is sponsored by the United States Office of Education, is for graduates of previous institutes. The teachers were chosen on the basis of their teaching experience and the recommendation of directors of the graduates' previous institutes.

In Mexico the teachers will live with Mexican families and will be required to use Spanish in all their daily activities. They will do course work in Spanish linguistics, conversation, composition, and Hispanic culture.

During the 1958-59 school year, Miss Jolly was on leave of absence from District 11 to study at Columbia University as a John Hay Fellow. She received a Fulbright Grant in 1962 for summer study at the University of Vallodolid in Burgos, Spain.

Miss Jolly is a graduate of Colorado Springs High School and a graduate Magna Cum Laude of Colorado College where she was a Phi Beta Kappa. She has taught in District 11 since 1940.

AFA Members To End Careers On May 31

Three Air Force Academy staff members will end careers totaling more than 68-years of service May 31.

Scheduled to retire are Maj. Richard L. Dadds, comptroller director of Athletics; SM. Sgt. Kenneth R. Jensen, data systems superintendent, comptroller; and T. Sgt. John F. Flanigan, NCOIC, roads and grounds, deputy chief of staff-engineering.

Maj. Dadds enlisted in the Regular Army July 22, 1940, at Chanute Field, Ill. In January 1941 he completed instruction at the Lowry Field, Photo School. After completing Officer Candidate School at Miami Beach, Maj. Dadds was assigned to Peterson Field, as Base Photo Officer. From Dec. 29, 1942, to June 1, 1945, he served in the Southwest Pacific Theater of Operations.

The major was relieved from active duty Nov. 18, 1945, in the grade of captain and in 1946 re-enlisted in the grade of master sergeant. Recalled to active commissioned service in 1951, Maj. Dadds served at Bryan AFB, Tex., completed the Comptroller Course at Maxwell AFB, Ala., spent two years at Ellington AFB, Tex., and completed his third overseas tour at Headquarters, Northern Air Materiel Area, Pacific, before joining the academy staff May 7, 1958.

A former Navy man, Sgt. Jensen served on the USS Salt Lake City and after volunteering for duty with the Asiatic Fleet on the USS Otus, Canopus, and Holland. Evacuated from the Philippine Islands on the submarine Pickerel, he served on the first U. S. war patrol and in the later naval engagement in the Makassar Straits. Between 1942 and 1944, Sgt. Jensen twice again saw service in the Pacific.

A member of the Naval Reserve from 1946 to 1950, the sergeant volunteered for active duty in July 1950. In 1952 he joined the Air Force and prior to assignment to the Academy in August 1963 was stationed at the Far East, and at McChord AFB, Wash., Travis AFB, Calif., and Hq. MATS, Scott AFB, Ill.

Sgt. Flanigan completed basic training with the 31st Engineer Company, Fort Belvoir, Va., and served with that unit until March 1943, when he was assigned to the Manhattan Project at Los Alamos.

Discharged in December, 1945, Sgt. Flanigan remained in civilian life until enlisting in the Air Force Feb. 17, 1949. In January 1951, he was assigned to the 51st Fighter Interceptor Wing on Okinawa and following outbreak of the Korean Conflict accompanied the unit to its operational bases in Japan and Korea.

Prior to reporting to the academy Aug. 24, 1962, the sergeant served overseas tours on Okinawa and in Iceland and at McGuire AFB, N. Y., and Suffolk County AFB, N. Y.

TOO SCARED TO CROW

When they arrived, they found Whitey, their 6-year-old rooster, clinging with feathers ruffled to the truck's undercarriage.

"We didn't hear a crow out of him," McKenney said after the 280-mile drive.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Don't Neglect Sore Mouth; Get to Your Dentist Quickly

This story was told to me by by a dentist and it's typical enough to be retold.

A patient with a "bump" on her tongue came to see him. On examination it appeared to be a slightly raised firm swelling about as big as, and shaped like, a small lima bean. Its surface was smoother than the rest of the tongue and it had an inflamed area that looked newly irritated. Its location was just to the right of the midline and about a half-inch from the tip.

The patient first noticed it about three weeks previously. Instead of "going away" it seemed to her to be getting bigger. Frequently during ithsime she accidentally bit it.

The rest of the tongue was normal in appearance. The floor of the mouth was normal. There were no enlarged glands in the neck.

The question was raised: Was this woman biting this area because it was enlarged and an easy target for her teeth? Or was the swelling caused by the accidental biting?

If biting produced the swelling then it was not likely to be cancer, although chronic irritations are considered to be a cause. If the swelling was present prior to biting then it might be malignant. The patient couldn't make this distinction. And at the time of this first examination the dentist couldn't either.

This is quite an ordeal for a dentist or physician. At this point he alone must assume responsibility for the true nature of the swelling and possibly for the very life of his patient. He must decide: Should this lesion be biopsied (tested for cancer)?

In this case he elected to treat it as a traumatic lesion caused by biting.

The patient was put on a soft diet so that chewing would be kept at a minimum. This meant less risk of biting. Warm salt water mouth wash was prescribed; teeth in the area were smoothed and polished. The patient was asked to return in three days.

The "bump" was smaller in three days and the inflamed area was almost healed. About one week later the inflamed area was healed and the swelling much reduced. In about three weeks the tongue was normal.

Diagnosis: Acute traumatic lesion of the tongue due to accidental biting.

Please don't try to diagnose and treat persistent mouth lesions yourself. They are potentially dangerous. If a lesion doesn't go away in two or three weeks, see your dentist.

Ex-Mill Owner Happy About Guerrilla Work

NEW YORK (AP) — Julio Lobo, 65, whose Cuban sugar empire was taken over by Fidel Castro in 1960, said Friday in New York he was "very happy" that anti-Castro guerrillas raided and damaged a mill he once owned.

"The guerrillas are heroes and patriots," he said.

"Friends have been calling me. They say how sorry they are. But I am not sorry at all. If it helps the fight against Castro, I would like every one of my mills to be burned to the ground."

Lobo now makes his home in New York.

Manitou Springs Woman's Paintings on Exhibition

Painting is a "wonderful relaxing hobby that brings many happy hours and friendships," according to Mrs. Annabell Gibbs of Manitou Springs, who is exhibiting a dozen of her works at Quinn's Custom Shop, 330 N. Institute St.

Mrs. Gibbs, who has never taken art lessons, said she has been painting for five or six years.

"I always wanted to paint but had no opportunity," she said. "A friend, the late Louise Cook, gave me a few pointers on materials and perspective and said 'anyone can paint if they want to — just practice, practice, practice.' ".

Mrs. Gibbs used shoe boxes for "canvasses" for her first efforts.

"Like music, painting is relaxing," she said. "It's fascinating to see a scene come to life before your eyes."

Mrs. Gibbs, her husband, Russell Gibbs, and daughter moved to Manitou Springs from Colorado Springs six years ago. They lived in Colorado Springs five years after moving west from Decatur, Ill.

Mrs. Gibbs does landscapes, mostly of pines, aspens, mountains and lakes, and points without first sketching her scene. She brushes on oils in long, easy flowing strokes using a wide brush.

Although she is an amateur painter, she has sold several paintings and has traded others or given them to friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs live at 112 Sumac Dr. in Manitou Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs have two children, Mrs. Gloria Lives and Ken Gibbs of Colorado Springs.

Burrows pleaded guilty, saying that a recent collision between his car and a bus occurred because he was driving too fast.

Dinah Shore Asking Divorce

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Singer Dinah Shore announced Friday she was divorcing her husband of less than a year, Maurice S. Smith, on grounds of mental cruelty.

A spokesman for Miss Shore said here the action was being filed Friday in Riverside County, Calif. The couple's residence has been in Palm Springs since their marriage on May 26 of last year.

Miss Shore, whose first marriage to actor George Montgomery lasted more than 17 years, was unavailable for comment on reasons for the divorce.

A spokesman, however, discounts reports that differences over her resuming her career in a Las Vegas resort hotel led to the split.

The Hollywood spokesman said Miss Shore and Smith separated "several days ago."

Smith, a Palm Springs contractor, and Miss Shore, 46, were married at San Bernardino, Calif., three weeks after her divorce from Montgomery became final. The marriage came as a surprise to friends who said they knew nothing of her plans.

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will increase the new striking power planned for the South Vietnamese Air Force by a third, it was learned today.

The 75 additional Skyraider dive bombers now due in South Viet Nam this summer will be boosted to more than 100, informed sources told The Associated Press.

Coupled with this, U.S. advisers will step up the tempo and scope of training to double the present 400 Vietnamese pilots and channel the best of them into flying the propeller-driven attack planes.

Vietnamese flyers already are piloting single-seat Skyraiders and T28 converted trainers in bombing and strafing attacks on Communist guerrillas. They also are operating certain kinds of transports, light reconnaissance planes and helicopters.

The objective of the expanded U.S. effort in this area is to get more of the Vietnamese to fly combat missions and thus to enable U.S. Air Force pilots, in Viet Nam for training chores, to stay out of the fighting as much as possible.

Informants said this is the meaning of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's statement Thursday that it is desirable to increase by 100 per cent the number of Vietnamese pilots and to strengthen further the Vietnamese Air Force.

"This will be done very promptly," McNamara said at the White House after returning from Saigon and reporting to President Johnson.

The defense secretary also spoke of the need to increase South Viet Nam's regular and paramilitary forces "very substantially and very soon" and of other steps to protect the peasant population from more active Communist terrorism.

The defense secretary's remark that it may be necessary to send over certain additional U.S. personnel to expand the training of the beefed-up Vietnamese forces is in line with what he has said in the past.

But once again, McNamara made it plain that U.S. policy is to bring home U.S. trainers when their job is done—for example, to withdraw specialists in aircraft maintenance when the Vietnamese have learned to handle the job themselves.

"I think, on balance, the number is not likely to increase substantially," McNamara said of the current total of about 16,000 American military men in South Viet Nam.

Red Guerrillas Wipe Out Viet Troop Column

By PETER ARNETT

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Viet Cong guerrillas inflicted one of their heaviest blows of the year today, nearly wiping out a government troop column 20 miles north of Saigon.

The South Vietnamese defense ministry said 51 government soldiers were killed and an uncounted number were wounded. There was no report of any American casualties.

The Communists struck from hidden positions along a roadside. Part of a government infantry battalion was being sent up the road to put pressure on the Viet Cong after a coordinated early morning guerrilla attack on three outposts and a district town.

There were only scattered details of the rout, but an American spokesman said it appeared to be a stunning loss for the government.

The Viet Cong continued its intensive campaign elsewhere in the countryside, rounding up 100 civilians near Tay Ninh and taking them into Cambodia, the defense ministry said.

The government defeat came two days after U. S. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara wound up his fifth field inspection of the war.

After reporting to President Johnson in Washington Thursday, McNamara said it may be necessary to increase the 15,000-man U.S. force in Viet Nam because of the increase in Communist attacks.

In Taipei, Nationalist China announced it is increasing both technical and economic assistance to South Viet Nam.

A four-man South Vietnamese military mission is in Formosa studying the political warfare work of the Chinese Nationalist armed forces. The mission is led by Lt. Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Le, chairman of the South Vietnamese Veterans Commission.

Taipei newspapers said Nguyen would be appointed director of a political warfare department to be set up in the Vietnamese armed forces.

Taxpayers Save Money on Paroles Posse Told

Colorado taxpayers save money when a man is put on parole, the Black Forest Sheriff's Posse was told at its May meeting last week.

The speaker was Donald L. Yeo of the Colorado State Parole Department. He works out of an office here, serving this area as part of the third district service.

The department has main offices in Denver, Brighton, Pueblo, Grand Junction and the State Penitentiary at Canon City and the State Reformatory at Buena Vista.

It costs the state about $2,000 a year to keep one man in different from that of a police-stitutions, plus what welfare costs involved for his family if it is forced to welfare and it usually is, Yeo said.

The man can be watched and assisted in adjustment back into the community for about $200 a year, Yeo added.

He pointed out that the role of a parole worker is much different fro mthat of a policeman in some ways, and quite the same in others.

A policeman enforces the law to protect society, Yeo said, and pointed out that the parole worker also helps protect society by attempting to help the convict readjust to society.

About 98 per cent of men convicted of crime and sentenced to one of the correctional institutions return to the community from which they come, he pointed out.

While parole probably can be justified on costs alone, Yeo said, it also has proven its worth as practice for the way in which it helps men adjust to civil life again.

He cited two small instances of cases where convicts on parole could get into trouble innocently and without help could lead to parole revocation:

One parolee didn't know how to use a dial phone and so resorted to simple ruse to get someone to use the telephone for him, and thus aroused suspicion.

Another ate a meal in a restaurant and then walked out without paying for it, as he had done for years in the prison mess hall. Naturally the police were called and the parolee was in trouble.

Who gets parole? Everyone except lifers and those in prison on death penalty is eligible to apply after he has served the minimum sentence, Yeo explained.

A man's application for parole is first cleared at the penal institution, then checked by parole officials before it goes to the parole board.

The parole board is comprised of the governor as chairman, or the lieutenant governor is chairman if the governor is absent, and if both are absent, the attorney general is chairman. Also there are three lay members appointed by the governor to six year terms.

A man approved for parole goes to a pre-parole center a few miles east of Canon City for special training that is aimed at conditioning him for the world he will face.

The present parole department and its system was set up in 1951 by a parole law. Today about 70 per cent of the offenders put on parole make good, he said.

The parole system is about as effective in any community as the community will allow it to be, he added.

Yeo said that he has had excellent cooperation in El Paso county.

Justice Sutton Will Seek Re-Election

Justice Leonard V. B. Sutton of the Colorado Supreme Court announced Saturday that he will seek re-election to a 10 year term on the state's highest Court.

He presently is completing an eight year term to which he was elected in 1956 after serving 10 months under an appointment by the then Governor Edwin C. Johnson.

Sutton served one year as Chief Justice in 1960 when the Supreme Court made outstanding gains in its efforts to cope with its rising flood of cases.

Justice Sutton's announcement was made in a letter to Robert Maytag, Democratic State chairman.

A native of Colorado Springs, where he still maintains his voting residence, Justice Sutton was long active in Democratic Party politics before his election in 1956. At that time he was El Paso County Democratic Chairman and a member of both the State Central and State Executive Committees as well as active head of the law firm of Sutton, Aman and Enoch.

At one time besides widespread activity as a trial lawyer and general practitiony, he also represented the Towns of Manitou Springs and Fountain as well as the El Paso County Planning Commission and County Board of Adjustment.

In World War II he entered the Army as a private and rose to the rank of captain serving four years in the infantry, ski troops, mule pack and later as Chief of Legal Branch of a large Army Headquarters.

Sutton, 49, is a graduate of Colorado College, with a major in political science. He received his law degree from the University of Denver Law School in 1941 where he was president of the Student Body.

In 1935-36 he studied in Europe and Asia on a scholarship and in 1937-38 received one of the coveted one year Fellowships in Government Administration from the National Institute of Public Affairs in Washington, D.C. In law school Sutton won the Nathan Burkan Copyright Law Contest Award and in 1963 served as Chairman of the National Awards Panel for this event. He is permitted to practice law in both federal and state courts.

tions, first in Colorado Springs and now in Denver, Justice Sutton once served as state chairman of the Colorado Junior Bar and in later years as chairman of various state and national bar association committees.

He is a lifetime member of the American Bar Association and holds memberships as well in the Colorado, El Paso County and Inter-American Bar Associations and American Judicature Society. Sutton has written several widely used articles on judicial and legal subjects and has used part of his vacation periods to lecture on law, judicial administration and government at various colleges and universities.

Last summer, during his vacation, he served as a guest law professor at New York University's famous Applegate Judges Seminar. He is a longtime member of the Institute of Judicial Administration at that school. Recently he was elected an Honorary Trustee of The Institute of International Education after several years service as an active trustee.

NAVY FLOAT — The USS Prairie Schooner is the first float to be entered in the "Pageant Parade of the Rockies." The Parade Float Committee has indicated that 15 floats have been entered and that 25 are expected to participate in the rodeo parade.

Big Plans in Offing For Rodeo Parade

The Pikes Peak or Bust Rodeo will become more than a regional activity in the future, according to rodeo week officials. In fact — nearly 100 Colorado Springs business, professional and military men are determined to make rodeo week the top summertime attraction throughout the nation.

"This year's parade and succeeding ones are being enlarged into a major attraction which will parallel the rodeo in importance," stated Verne Johnson, parade coordinator. "To be known as the Pageant Parade of the Rockies, the parade will be developed into an event synonymous with the Pasadena Tournament of Roses, the Phoenix Parade, and the Calgary Canada Parade," he said.

Unlike previous rodeo parades, this event will be heralded with many beautiful float entries as well as carefully selected equestrian units, bands and other marching elements. With the theme of "Westward Ho!" all float entries will conform to this theme. The theme depicts the development and progress of the west from the 1800s until the present, according to parade coordinators.

During the past two months parade Chairmen Phil Hendricks and Verne Johnson, assisted by Clay Banta and J. D. Ackerman, have been coordinating policy matters and the overall promotion of the parade with ten committees.

The most vital committee, the Entry's Committee, is headed by Wm. Thayer Tutt and staffed by 17 Colorado Springs community leaders. Their task is to obtain all entries for the parade which includes the top marching bands, the marching units and float sponsors.

Other committee heads are Ed Bever For Floats; Bob Phelps, Traffic Control; Gordon Sweet for Awards; Clay Banta, Queen Committee; Mike Edwards will handle the concessions; Millard Porte equestrian outfits; Hal Litrell for Finance, and Ray Kranz, Bands and Music.

Fifteen floats have been committed to the parade thus far and a total of 25 are expected according to Ed Bever. These float entries have come from military, civic and business groups in the City. "The first float entry was submitted by the Naval Forces Staff of NORAD," according to Bever.

The Float Committee stressed that all float participants must submit a colored sketch of the proposed float to their committee, through the Chamber of Commerce, by June 15. Dimensions of the float shall not exceed 40 feet in length, a 20 foot width, and 15 foot height. "Upon float acceptance, a member of the Float Committee will be assigned to assist and guide the participant throughout the construction period," stated parade officials. Any deviations from the specification standards must be approval by Bever's Float Committee.

Another comment on float construction — all portions of the float proper must be decorated in various colored crepe paper and tinsel.

To stay within the parade float theme, "Westward Ho," the float committee makes the following suggestions: historical events in the west, pioneers and their covered wagons, famous forts and landmarks, hunting and fishing scenes and gold rush scenes.

Rules and regulations concerning float building can be obtained through the Chamber of Commerce. "Imagination, civic pride, and inventiveness are the keys to designing and building award winning floats," reminds the committee.

Several major trophies will be awarded to the top floats with many more lesser awards being made.

Parade officials have already cleared through the City Council for the approval of erecting stands in the Acacia Park and Courthouse areas, the selling of programs, and the operation of concessions.

The City Council was told that in time nationally known bands, marching units, equestrian groups, and celebrities will be asking to participate in the parade when it becomes recognized nation-wide.

New Convent to Be Built At Corpus Christi Parish

The Right Rev. Anthony G. Elzi, pastor of Corpus Christi Church, has announced the awarding of an approximately $110,000 contract for the construction of a new convent.

A location has been secured in the 2400 block of North Cascade Avenue, where a two-story building will be erected as a residence for the nine Sisters who teach in the Corpus Christi School.

The School Sisters of Saint Francis have been occupying a remodeled railroad boarding house since their arrival in Colorado Springs from their Motherhouse in Milwaukee in the early 1920's.

Monsignor Elzi said that the proposed convent was planned by John B. Pahls, local building designer, who has designed many large homes in the Pikes Peak area as well as throughout the entire state. It was he who also planned the Corpus Christi rectory.

Mr. Pahls has been in practice as a building designer in Colorado Springs since 1949. He also maintained an office in Miami, Fla. from 1934 until he entered the Armed Services in 1941.

The contract was awarded to George C. Tackels, general contractor, who constructed the recent addition to the school.

The new convent is of contemporary design, brick on masonry and approximately 6,500 square feet.

It consists of a main building, two floors in height with a half basement, and a chapel wing on the ground floor. The first floor, in addition to the chapel, will contain a parlor, an office, a music room, and community room, project room, dining room, kitchen, and a housekeeper's suite.

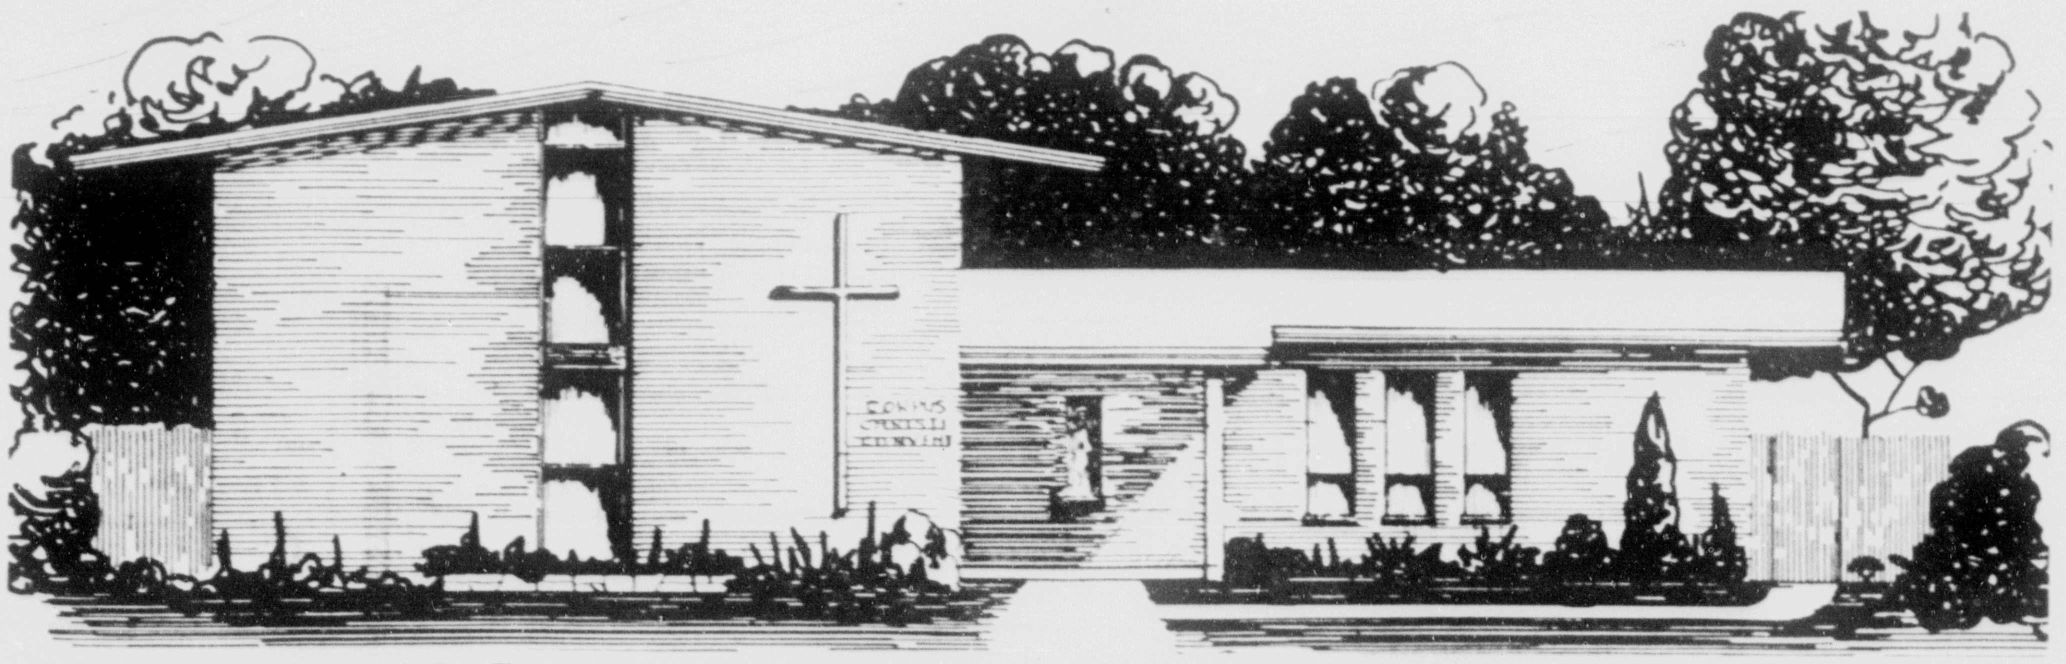
The second floor consists of eleven bedrooms, the superior's quarters, and an infirmary, as well as bath facilities and linen and general storage space.

The basement has a large recreation room, 16 feet by 40 feet, laundry, food storage, general storage, and boiler room.

The erection of this residence will climax the long-range expansion program laid down in 1948 by Monsignor Elzi. Nineteen fifty saw the completion of an eight room elementary school and the rectory which is located at 3218 N. Cascade Ave.

In 1956 the Corpus Christi Church was dedicated.

In 1959 four more rooms were added to the school which had grown in enrollment from 90 students in 1941 to 550 students. With the completion of the convent, the total outlay by the parishioners, will have exceeded one million dollars, the Monsignor said.



NEW CORPUS CHRISTI CONVENT — This new building will be erected in the 2400 block of North Nevada Avenue. The two-story structure will house the nuns who teach at the Corpus Christi School. The convent, to be built at an approximate $110,000 cost, will be of contemporary design, brick on masonry and will contain approximately 6,500 square feet. It will afford a half basement, chapel wing on the ground floor, parlor, office, music room, community room, project room, dining room and kitchen plus a housekeeper's suite.

Swallow Publishes More Stirring Books of West

By JOHN FETLER
Book Editor

Alan Swallow in Denver, through his sage books, continues to pour out fine, readable books about Western lore. Two recent books in this category are "Lost Trails of the Cimarron" by Harry E. Chrisman (Sage-$5) and "Chariot of the Sun ... My Experiences in the Indian Territory" by Catherine Ward Allen (Sage-$4.75).

A rather interesting note about "Lost Trails" has come from the English Westerners Tally Sheet in London, England, which says: "Sage Books have established a reputation for top line, regional books ... essential for historians ... Harry E. Chrisman has produced a book which bridges the gap between regional history and the broad sphere of the West by combining the best of both."

The "Lost Trails of the Cimarron" records the findings of nearly a lifetime spent by Chrisman in collecting original material about the great cattle days of the High Plains Southwest, the Neutral Strip, southwest Kansas, and the Panhandle areas of Texas and Oklahoma. Here were centerd the vast movements of cattle over the immense grasslands - to Dodge City and other railheads for shipment, or on the trails to Nebraska, the Dakotas, Wyoming, and Montana. And here developed the important ranches of "the sea of grass."

Chrisman starts his account with the buffalo hunting days, which effectively destroyed the use of the lands by buffalo and Indians. Then he outlines the trails and the movements of the trail herds toward Dodge City or beyond. The remainder of the book is devoted to accounts of the men and ranches and towns (many of them now ghost towns) which made this area a vast economy based on grass and beef. With the economy came a whole way of life, on range and in town, detailed by stories gained often firsthand from survivors.

As the publisher states colorfully "Lost Trails of the Cimarron pictures completely this bygone day which was unique upon the North American Continent and can return no more, ... the important and the lowly people, the customs, the bad deeds and the good deeds, the brawling, tough, but often kindly days of a special civilization. More than 40 pictures adds life to this account. Chrisman, by the way, has been a newspaperman for the past 14 years.

The book by Mrs. Allen is of a more personal nature. She came to Kansas with her parents in 1886. As a child of six, she made a trip of more than a year's duration into the Indian Territory of Oklahoma with her uncle John Douglas, who had taken land there. Her return trip was made by way of the old Chisholm Trail. When her father made his "run" into the Cherokee Strip, she moved there with her family to live to young womanhood. There she married Mervyn E. Allen and raised her family, her husband being prominent in insurance and real estate circles in north central Oklahoma, and city clerk at Pond Creek for 41 years.

The race into the Cherokee Strip was unquestioningly the greatest event of its kind ever to take place in human annals. As time passes, and the event recedes into history, the men and women who participated passing from the scene, one can look backward in time and realize that for sheer rugged adventure, for audacity in its conception, and for the fine sportsmanship shown in its execution, "The Run" stands unparalleled in American history.

The number of participants - 100,000 men and women, some with their children along, posed many problems. For numbers it challenges the modern multitudes that all-out publicity musters for the massive spectator - audiences in the sports palaces of the world. But where, today, would one find an activity or contest to produce 40,000 winners for such a prize as they vied for on that September day in 1893 - more than six million acres of productive land.

In "Chariot of the Sun" Catherine Ward Allen tells not only of her girlhood adventures in the Indian Territory, but also of her father's race into the strip to gain a landhold for himself and his growing family. The result is a drama-packed story that is interesting to all ages, a refreshing, true story of an old and famous tale, the opening of the last frontier in Oklahoma.

Of special interest is that Harry E. Chrisman, author of the first-mentioned book, who is a busy writer himself, helped Mrs. Allen in the preparation of the manuscript for Sage Books, with excellent results.

Squadron Will Receive Fifth Honor Banquet

The Honor Squadron of the Cadet Wing of the U. S. Air Force Academy will receive its Fifth Annual Honor Squadron Banquet, Saturday, thanks to the sponsorship of the Air Power Council of Colorado Springs and the Air Force Association Headquarters in Washington, D. C.

The Air Power Council, a group of 200 civilian business leaders who believe in the concepts of modern air power, originated the sponsorship of this banquet in 1958. It has grown from an original attendance of 240 to what will be 550 guests this year. This year's banquet will be held in the Broadmoor International Center.

The largest and most impressive list of industrialists yet to attend an Honor Squadron Banquet has caused the move to the more spacious International Center. An advance registration of the first 50 guests includes W. B. Bergen, president of the Martin Co.; Dr. Robert W. Buckheim, U. S. Air Force Chief Scientist; Joseph W. Crosby, president Thiokol Chemical Co.; Daniel J. Haughton, president, Lockheed Aircraft Corp.; Thomas V. Jones, president Northrop Corp.; Roger Lewis, president General Dynamics, plus 10 other corporation presidents and 28 senior or executive vice presidents.

Co-sponsors of the event are the Air Force Association headquarters in Washington. This group has provided the program, has added prestige to the occasion and has helped provide distinguished guests. Toastmasters and special speakers have included Arthur Godfrey, Cartoonist Milt Caniff, X-15 test pilot Major Robert White, the famous retired Air Force genal, Jimmy Doolittle, and, for the past three years, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, General Curtis LeMay. In addition to General LeMay, and Superintendent of the Academy, Major General Robert Warren, Lieutenant General Herbert Thatcher, commander, Air Defense Command, will be an honored guest and will be at the head table.

Toastmaster for this year's dinner will be Hollywood's own Air Force general, Jimmy Stewart. General LeMay will again be on hand. Another advance reservation has been received from Robert Cummings of Hollywood.

The banquet honors one of the 24 squadrons of the Cadet Wing, approximately 110 cadets in all, and the squadron which wins the Air Force Association Melanaphy Trophy as the Honor Squadron. Points are accumulated on the basis of academic excellence, excellence in intramural athletics, military excellence and participation in varsity athletics.

Water Training Safety Courses Scheduled

The Pikes Peak Chapter of the American Red Cross announces the annual instructor training course in Water Safety during the week of 8-12 June.

Gilbert Gribble, who is the area's safety services director, will come here to conduct the course.

The course, which will be held at the Wasson High School swimming pool from 9-12 and 1-4 daily, is designed to qualify persons to be qualified water safety instructors. It is through this program that approximately 2,5000 persons are qualified yearly in the Pikes Peak area in various stages of swimming and life saving qualifications.

Gribble, who is one of the best instructors in the Red Cross, offers an interesting but demanding course. Anyone qualified by him may be considered "tops" as an instructor. All the life saving skills are thoroughly covered and the graduates must be able to demonstrate them as well as to teach them.

Qualified and interested persons should call the Chapter House at 632-3563 to register for this course. Since attendance must be limited to insure the quality of the course, those desiring the course should call immediately. Applicanys must be 18 years of age and possess a current life saving certificate.

JETSTREAM Gets First Class Honor Rating

A First Class honor rating was awarded the JETSTREAM, Air Academy High School, USAF Academy, Colorado, in the 70th All American Newspaper Critical Service of the National Scholastic Press Association.

More than 1,000 student newspapers from high schools all over the nation are judged by NSPA in groups divided by enrollment, frequency of publication and method of printing.

The top honor rating, All American, represents superior accomplishment and is reserved for top publications. A First Class honor rating means the newspaper is excellent but lacks the outstanding qualities needed for All American. Second Class ratings are awarded to papers which are average in quality. Third Class ratings indicate major weaknesses are evident.

Entries in the NSPA Critical Service are judged in all areas of production from coverage through writing and makeup. NSPA has conducted its newspaper Critical Service for 43 years. NSPA headquarters are at 18 Journalism Building, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 14.

What About a Hearing Aid?

Most people believe perfect hearing can magically be restored by just making everything louder for the hard of hearing person. Nothing could be further from the truth. Hearing losses vary greatly by type, degree, duration, and the persons ability to interpret sounds. A poorly selected aid, that does not properly compensate for individual needs and problems, will make hearing worse rather than better. Only a qualified hearing aid specialist can give you maximum help for your individual loss. We are qualified thru years of experience and continual study.

Call for a home appointment or come in for an electronic hearing test and evaluation.

SWAP AWARD — SWAP Club-Chamber of Commerce Right Attitude Award was presented Carlton E. Finney. L. to R.: Committee Chairman James A. Smith, Finney and SWAP Club President Tom Wilkinson.

I Remember

By CHARLES S. DUDLEY

Whoever heard of a log building made with the logs on end, like growing trees? Well, there is one. It is a historic fort at 2818 W. Pikes Peak Ave., owned by C. G. Schnepel, 2403 N. Corona St., and marked, at the front gate, or was at least, as a historical landmark of old Colorado City, now the West Side of Colorado Springs.

Schnepel not long ago was in the Gazette Telegraph office, and something he said seemed to solve a riddle I have long wondered at. I talked with him once before. He told me then that some of the plaster had once fallen in the old building and that behind it could be seen the log construction, not observable from the outside of the structure. But I don't think he mentioned at that time that the logs stood upright. He did the other day.

I have written up that old structure, in which women and children of Colorado City were "forted up" in the 1860's when it was believed that the town was to be attacked by Indians. The attack did not materialize, although there was some horse stealing and also some isolated killing in what is now Colorado Springs and to the east of it.

What set me to wondering was the statement in the historic book of the late Irving Howbert that at the fort in Colorado City there was a palisade made of green logs, which Indians could not easily set on fire by shooting flaming arrows. I inquired and inquired where that palisade was, and was not able to locate the site of it. I finally came to the conclusion that it was built around this old house called a fort and that it had entirely disappeared as houses were constructed on adjoining lots. I supposed it was an enclosure considerably larger than the house inside of it now called the old fort. I conjured up a picture of the women and children at that time of an expected attack by Indians being out of doors inside of the green log palisade if the weather was pleasant, but ready to rush inside the house and lock the doors as men of "Old Town" hastened to rally around the place and repel the redskins from inside the palisade.

Although here was one old fort plainly marked by pioneers on Pikes Peak Avenue I could unearth no fragment of information of where the palisade was if not around this house. I knew Irving Howbert and had talked with him many times, but when I read in his book about this palisade he had died.

Well, now I come to the conclusion that the house which was the old fort and the green log palisade were one and the same structure. If the logs were freshly cut so as not to be easily inflammable they would naturally be set on end in making a palisade. And if later that palisade was made into a house and that house, except for the marker at the front gate, looking much like any other house in the block, my riddle is solved.

I am resolved to pry into this matter further for I have great curiosity concerning it. It seems to me I remember that Dorothy Smith, curator of the Colorado Springs Pioneers Museum, once told me she had seen logs inside of the walls of that house when some alterations in it were being made.

Of course if some arrowheads could be found sticking into those interior log walls the riddle would be solved.

But how could that be when the expected Indian attack was not made? I am letting my imagination get the better of me. This is something Glenn Hutchinson has often accused me of. I tell him that when I am gone, if he takes over a column of historical interest, he can write in the first issue of it:

Four Materiel employes earned awards for their participation in the Academy suggestions program. They include: T. Sgt. David Wiseman, NCOIC, General Purpose and Special Equipment Maintenance; Basil Harris, cadet shoulder board repairman; Robert Christ, foreman, Paint and Fabric Section, and Ray Hagen, special equipment mechanic.

Sgt. Wiseman received an award of $50 for his suggestion to filter the air going to generators on Academy buses. The idea reduced the need for generator overhaul and will result in an estimated first year savings of $1,373 in manhours and materiel.

Top award of $85 went to Harris. He suggested cadet shoulder boards be pre-punched. Due to the thickness of the felt boards, seamstresses previously had difficulty sewing them. In additon to saving an estimated $1,600 a year, the new process helped the seamstresses avoid piercing their fingers with needles.

A letter of Commendation went to Christ for his idea to pre-punch the backs of the shoulder boards.

Brazil to Aid Cuba Isolation Attempts

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)—Brazil will support Venezuela's campaign to isolate Cuba from the rest of Latin America, says President Humberto Castello Branco.

In his first news conference since he took office after the ouster of leftist President Joao Goulart on April 1, Castello Branco said he had carefully studied a report by the Organization of American States charging Cuba with aggression against Venezuela.

He said he would join Venezuela before the OAS in seeking a collective break in diplomatic relations and an economic embargo against Cuba.

UNDER PRESSURE

LIBERAL, Kan. (AP)—Police quenched the enthusiasm of four teen-agers for big water pistols because of their victims' dry sense of humor.

Two men complained to police they were almost knocked down by a stream of water from a passing car.

Police corralled the car and found the four youths using a farm spray gun filled with water and backed by 100 pounds of air pressure.

Resident's Father Dies in Connecticut

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — David Adams Uebelacker, chief of the nickel and zinc division of the War Production Board during the early days of World War II, died Friday in Grace-New Haven Hospital. He was 65.

He was a former director of Ford, Bacon & Davis, Inc., a New York City construction firm with which he was associated for 22 years.

Uebelacker was a director of its Canadian division at the time of his retirement in 1959.

Uebelacker is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. James H. Donald of Colorado Springs, Colo., and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be Monday in Old Lyme, Conn., where he resided.

WHY JUNE?

CHICAGO (UPI) — Why June has become the traditonal month of weddings probably relates to the transportation difficulties in early America—too much snow in winter to get to wedding celebrations, according to Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia.

Another influencing factor: June is named after the Roman goddess, Juno. The Greeks had a different name for the same goddess, calling her Hera. At any rate, this Juno—or Hera—was the goddess of womanhood or marriage and of maternity.

Since the sun was a god in many primitive societies, it was believed that if a bride-to-be gazed on the sun she would be certain to have children.

AFA Cadet Rides Elephant to Racing Victory

Nearly 7,000 miles separate the pine studded site of the Air Force Academy from the tangled jungles of Africa but Cadet First Class Thomas Webster of Weirton, W. Va., "covered the distance" in a few seconds recently.

Cadet Webster rode a swiftly moving eight-year-old elephant named Bimbo to victory in the third annual Intercollegiate Elephant Race at Orange State College, Fullerton, Calif.

Voluntary contributions from the entire Cadet Wing paid for blue clad mahout's entry in the unique race and covered the mandatory insurance as well.

The West Virginia cadet admits his closest prior contact with pachyderms of any size or shape had been at zoos or circuses, but he had little trouble guiding Bimbo over the 100-yard course.

A pit crew of six accompanied the volunteer pilot to Fullerton.

Cadet officers from the 21st presented a large golden trophy signifying the victory to Commandant of Cadets Brig. Gen. Robert W. Strong. It will be placed in an Arnold Hall display case among more conventional testimonials to Academy prowess.

Cadet Webster admits his brief acquaintance with Bimbo was long enough. From now on he'll be more than happy to travel by more conventional means of transport.

Restraining Order Burned by Mother

MISSION, Kan. (AP) —Deputy Sheriff Ed Blagrave was assigned to go to the home of a mother of 11 who is being sued for divorce and deliver a court order restraining her from bothering her husband.

He submitted this report Friday:

"She refused to take the summons and told me it would not go into her house. She requests I hold the summons a minute, and I did. She then took a match and set fire to it, saying 'God is my witness.' While the burning took place, she prayed and blessed me. After the fire ritual was over, with burnt fingers and a kind heart I left her, and her last statement was, 'I shall pray for you.'"

East Junior To Give Ninth Grade Party

Four hundred twenty-one invitations have been hand delivered by the following ninth grade girls: Cathy Cox, Ann Costello, Cathy Stokes, Joyce Geiger, Pixie Hilfrick and Pam Fleming.

Decoration carrying out the Paris motif have been made by the ninth grade art students, under the supervision of Mr. P. Sindlinger, art instructor. A huge mural of Paris at night in the spring will cover one wall. An Eiffel tower is being constructed that will be 20 feet in height. Sidewalk cafes and etchings of Paris scenes will form a great part of the decorations, also adding much atmosphere. There will also be kiosks (advertising pillars), which are seen on many street corners in Paris.

Dancing to a combo, games of many varieties, caricatures being drawn and photographs taken will be some of the many ways to spend the evening.

During the first intermission the ADC chorus will entertain and during the second intermission there will be entertainment by the ninth grade students as follows: A chorus of girls composed of Kathy Haskin, Judy Hopkins, Chris Steiner, Paula Whalley, Kathleen Gilmore and Karleen Gilmore, will sing several numbers. A chorus of Can Can girls composed of Pam Norwood, Ann Schenk, Susan Wear, Coeta Ingels and Marcia Deal. Boys who will entertain with both instrumental music and songs are Ivan Crawford, Don Becker, Roy Weidenhaft, John Thompson, Steve Pettigrew, Alex Christie and Don Chavez.

Refreshments will be served throughout the evening. Mrs. William Becker is chairman of the party and A. Ricketts is ninth grade liaison.

When fresh asparagus shows in the market, try this: Cook the asparagus until it is just tender. Marinate it in a favorite salad dressing, and cool. To serve, wrap 4 stalks per service in thin slices of ham or smoked salmon. Garnish with lettuce and pimiento strips.

Kaman to Do Computer Services for ARADCOM

The Army Air Defense Command and Kaman Nuclear jointly announced the recent signing of a contract involving computer services by Kaman to the Combat Developments Division of the G-3 (Operations and Training) Section at ARADCOM headquarters.

To facilitate requirements of the new contract, Kaman Nuclear has acquired a Control Data Corp. 1604 computer system. A large portion of the computer's time and the services of certain Kaman scientists will be made available to process the ARADCOM computer programs. Several staff members of ARADCOM G-3 Section have moved to the Kaman plant to work with the computer facilities.

Dick Vogel, director of the computer facilities at Kaman Nuclear since 1960, said that the new, larger CDC-1604 now does in minutes what used to take days on Kaman's former computer.

The new system can do approximately 40,000 multiplication or division problems in one second and is capable of remembering more than 32,000 11-digit numbers in its magnetic core memory. Equipped with a printer, the system can print simultaneously 120 columns of information at a rate of 1,000 lines per minute and the magnetic tape drive can deliver to the computer 30,000 characters of information per second.

Jim Galvin, Kaman's commercial data processing representative, described the computer as the largest in the area and said it offers commercial data processing to a regional clientele.

Timken to Enlarge Shipping Building

A one-half-million dollar extension to the main shipping building at the Timken Roller Bearing Company's Gambrinus steel mill near Canton, Ohio was announced last week by E. S. Hoppes Jr., vice president — steel and tube operations. The new building will increase Steel and Tube Division shipping facilities by one-third.

The extension will be located next to the present Steel Sales warehouse. The site has been cleared and construction is scheduled to start within three weeks. Plans call for completion of the project by late summer. Construction will require relocation of an existing roadway and railroad track.

By concentrating shipping activity into one building, the Steel and Tube Division will be able to accelerate delivery of customer orders. Efficiency in product handling and shipment preparation will be increased.

Stock Market Highlighted By Cautious Irregularity

By ED MORSE

AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)— Strength in a selection of mining stocks and cautious irregularity in the list as a whole highlighted stock markt action last week.

The popular averages were contradictory as to whether the market rose or fell, but losers outnumbered gainers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Meanwhile, weekly volume slipped to 25,505,050 shares from 26,796,270 the week before.

About 1.9 million shares were accounted for by the two volume leaders, Texas Gulf Sulphur, which rose 4⅛, and Calumet & Hecla, which advanced 6½.

For Texas Gulf it was a continuation of interest in its rich mineral discovery in Ontario. Calumet astonished Wall Street by leaping 10 points on Tuesday because of a report that its already-known copper lode in Michigan constituted a big reserve of high-grade ore. It encountered profit taking in subsequent sessions.

Trading interest spread out to a variety of mining issues, several of them quite low-priced as buyers hoped that lightning woul strike and bring them quick capital gains on previous neglected issues. As the week ended, Wall Streeters were speculating about which metal stock would be the next to catch the public fancy.

In the course of the week, the AP average made an historic high of 307.8 but the Dow industrials remained below their all-time peak of 830.17 reached the previous week.

Of 1,517 issues traded this week, 741 declined and 611 advanced.

Rails emerged with a clear-cut gain on the week. They were helped by encouraging reports emanating from annual shareholders meetings and also by word that President Johnson plans to recommend legislation which would allow rail freight rates to emerge from strict government controls.

Cigarette stocks had a spell of weakness followed by a period of strength as bearish and bullish reports came regarding the industry. Savings-and-loan holding companies enjoyed a brief rally. Airlines spurted and then relapsed into another siege of profit taking.

MUSEUM LACKS VISITORS

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's best art collection, in the Hermitage at Leningrad, attracts fewer visitors a year than the number of exhibits.

It has some two million exhibits in 300 halls but draws less than 1½ million visitors annually, according to Tass news agency.

Recognized throughout the world as one of the greatest art galleries, the Hermitage has a wide collection of Renaissance art and claims a better representation of Dutch masters than can be found in the Netherlands.

Boettcher & Co. To Move June 1 To 10 E. Pikes Peak

Boettcher and Co., brokerage firm, will move its Colorado Springs office June 1 from the Antlers Hotel, where it has been located since June 1957, to 10 E. Pikes Peak Ave., formerly occupied by the Montgomery Ward catalogue store, now being remodeled.

Clients will be able to punch buttons to receive stock quotations direct from the exchanges with the electronic equipment to be installed.

Presently the company flashes a moving tape on a screen for the benefit of ticker tape watchers. This will be replaced with "Lectrascan," an electronic ticker. A series of electronic cells will flash information on a board.

"This will be a great improvement over the old system," Robert F. Delaney, resident manager of the office, said.

Another addition will be "Telequote III" to report information requested by clients immediately from an exchange. Presently it is necessary to wire New York City for information.

"This should be quite an attraction," Delaney said, "after clients learn the simple procedure for punching the right buttons." Information will be flashed on a small video screen on one unit and reported on another machine.

The manufacturer says Telequote III is as simple to operate as a 10-key adding machine, and will report bid-asked-last, open-high-low-close, trend of last sale, volume, time since last sale, dividend and price earnings ratio, New York Stock Exchange volume, tape late, Dow Jones averages (as of the preceding half hour) and Standard and Poor's hourly reports.

A feature of Telequote III is the memory unit which stores all facts and figures reported for the day until exchanges reopen.

Delaney believes his company's move to more complicated electronic equipment follows a general trend for bonding and brokerage firms.

For more than 50 years Boettcher and Co., has played a prominent role in pioneering the economic development of the Rocky Mountain Region. The company is headquartered in Denver and has maintained a Colorado Springs office since since 1929 except for a few years in the 1930s.

The company was founded in 1910 by Claude K. Boettcher, industrialist and son of pioneer Colorado builder Charles Boettcher, and John Henry Porter, son of early-day Denver financier Henry M. Porter. The firm was formed to attract capital to build the West and today has offices in Chicago, Boulder, Greeley, Fort Collins, Pueblo, New York City and Grand Junction as well as Colorado Springs and Denver.

It is the largest municipal bonding house west of the Mississippi River and the 10th largest in the nation, company officials said.

STILL WITH THE DUCKS

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP) — Duck hunter John F. Oberstaller says he hunted the wild game for a half century, and now that he's retired he makes miniature ducks by hand.

"I began making these little ones out of cork as a hobby," he said.

The 68-year-old retired courthouse employee carves the tiny foul from chunks of discarded insulating cork and affixes heads, wings and tails carved from pine wood.

He then paints them complete with feathers until the finished product is amazingly realistic.

Largest Motel Hotel Meet Set For Flying W

Summer is just around the corner! This is so because the Flying W Chuckwagon is hosting their annual motel-hotel chuckwagon supper - today. In connection with the supper, Gene Reed of the Reed Ranch Indoor Rodeos is hosting a rip-roaring rodeo for these motel owners and operators.

There will be more motel operators together at this one affair then probably will assemble again until next year, officials said. Over 1,000 reservations have been made, and the total will probably be somewhere around 1,100. They are coming from Colby, Kan., west to Salida, and Buena Vista, Estes Park, Longmont, and south to the motels of the Arkansas Valley, Flying W personnel said.

This supper and rodeo is staged to acquaint the motel owners with the fine facilities of the Flying W, where chuckwagon suppers are held each summer, starting the first of June and running through Labor Day, serving Bar-B-Q Beef and other Western fare, typical of the old West.

After the meal, the guests will be entertained by the Flying W Wranglers and Wranglerettes, as well as see some authentic Indian dances, by the Taos Indian Dancers.

There are seven Indians living at the Flying W. Pueblo this summer. Some are from Taos, N. M., these Pueblo Indians are the dancers.

Others are Navajo Indians from the Red Rock, Ariz. area, and are the rug weavers. There is a Santa Clara Pueblo girl that does beautiful black pottery. These indians have all arrived and really make the desires of the typical visitor to the region come true - to see cowboys and indians when they come west!

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The earthquake that shook Alaska also shook up lumber mill operator Jack Brandis.

He started a campaign to donate lumber and plywood to needy Alaskans ravaged by the quake. He started the drive off with 50,000 feet of half-inch exterior plywood.

The material was consigned to Alaska's Gov. William Egan.

Southgate State Bank will install electronic data processing equipment.

Business Issues May Be Resolved During Summer

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—The political furor tends either to hide or distort the business perplexities which also may be resolved this summer. And these largely nonpolitical issues can set the pattern for the income you may expect and the prices you may find on the goods and services you want.

The party campaigns are being waged against a background of general prosperity and growin confidence. At the midpoint in the second quarter of the year the majority of reports show the economy at new heights with good chances of going still higher if—

On the income side there are new wage patterns to be hammered out this summer, with chief interest centered on the auto industry.

Washington is trying hard to get both labor and management to follow what it calls guidelines. Primarily they preach moderation. Washington wants labor to ask for pay increases that won't upset the balance of production costs and prices. And it wants management to resist any wage demands that would force price increases and cancel out the benefits from the cut in federal income taxes.

Labor is well aware that many corporations are reporting record profits along with rising sales.

Management spokesmen are busily pointing out that profits should go still higher if new capital is to be attracted for the financing of business expansion to meet the goals of economic growth.

Many businessmen feel that as soon as competition permits, or when production costs mount again, prices must go up to provide adequate profit margins on sales.

Another mystery also is expected to be solved before autumn. This is how the consumer will finally react to the federal tax cut savings. So far he has been spending the new money moderately, saving some of it, using the rest to pay up old debts. If the consumer starts spending a lot more by fall, the pressure to hammer out sizable wage increases and to raise prices to meet the higher payroll will build up.

At issue is the possibility of another round of inflation. There is little sign of it at the second quarter's midpoint. There could be plenty of signs by election time.

'Fringe Benefits' Mostly Asked By Auto Union

By NEIL GILBRIDE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although Walter Reuther is demanding of the auto industry a 4.9 per cent increase for his United Auto Workers, high administration officials expect no worse than a little scraped paint off President Johnson's wage-price guideposts.

Johnson has asked labor to keep wage demands within the 3.2 per cent productivity increase which the government estimates for industry generally.

Since much of UAW President Reuther's 4.9 per cent package demand is in fringe benefits, government officials say it will be virtually impossible to put a hard cost figure on them.

"The government can't argue against earlier retirement because that would create more jobs," an administration official said.

Reuther has insisted that major companies — particularly General Motors—can meet major demands of his AFL-CIO union and reduce auto prices at the same time, still showing good profits.

Johnson is understood to view autos as one of the industries which can afford a price cut but administration spokesmen are not hopeful of this.

The administration believes General Motors won't cut prices if for no other reason than it would put pressure on the smaller companies and possibly open the giant firm up to antitrust complaints.

Even though the administration is exhibiting intense interest in the auto negotiations which begin in July, there is little or no likelihood that Johnson might step in to solve any impasse between labor and management.

Nikita Returns To Aswan for Final Ceremony

By DAVID LANCASHIRE

Cheers that have been ringing in the Soviet leader's ears since the start of his 17-day state tour one week ago, erupted again when he and Nasser, hands joined in the air, arrived at noon at the dam site.

They had flown in Khrushchev's private airliner from the Red Sea port of Ras Banas after a day and a half cruise aboard the Egyptian presidential yacht Hourriya.

Originally they were due back here Friday night.

Dump trucks laden with huge granite stones were standing on the shores to fill a final gap in the foundation of the dam acrossthe Nile River.

A few hours before Khrushchev returned, an Egyptian information officer in Aswan said Khrushchev was shortening his scheduled visit to ancient Luxor Sunday because "he is tired."

With temperatures soaring above 100 degrees Khrushchev is changing his program to spend only two hours in Luxor on the Nile instead of most of the day.

Teacher Pay Still Lagging, Report Claims

By G. K. HODENFIELD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teacher salaries have nearly doubled since the 1950-51 school year, but they still lag far behind most other professional workers, the National Education Association reports.

The NEA said the national average salary of classroom teachers this year is $5,963, an increase of $231 over 1962-63.

This year's figure is 97.2 per cent higher than in 1950-51. In that 13-year period, the average salary of elementary-school teachers rose by 106.6 per cent, secondary-school teachers by 81.4 per cent.

Secondary-school teachers this year are making an average of $6,214, elementary-school teachers $5,797.

According to 1960 census figures, the NEA said the average salary for all teachers ranked 15th in a list of 20 professions. Only social and welfare workers, librarians, ementary-school teachers, clergymen and dieticians ranked below them.

Salaries of secondary-school teachers ranked slightly higher than the average for all teachers. Physicians and surgeons led the list, with average annual income three times that of teachers. No dollar figures were given.

The NEA report, "Economic Status of Teachers in 1963-64," said the typical beginning teacher in the largest cities, where the highest salaries are paid, starts at an annual salary of $4,700.

This is estimated to be at least $1,000 less than a male college graduate could expect as a starting wage in virtually any other profession.

The report did not include a state by state breakdown of average teacher salaries.

Alaska, however, has the highest average instructional staff salaries—$8,233. This, the NEA noted, reflects a much higher cost of living in Alaska than elsewhere.

Other top-ranking states: California $7,800, New York $7,400, Connecticut $7,050 and Illinois $6,535.

The lowest average salary for instructional staff is paid in Mississippi, $3,975. In this same category are Arkansas $4,098, South Carolina $4,425, South Dakota $4,500, and North Dakota $4,550.

Former Florence Resident May Be Crash Victim

George Camerlo, 21-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Camerlo, former Florence residents, is one of 10 navy men believed lost in the crash of a U.S. Navy patrol bomber in the Atlantic ocean 25 miles southwest of Rota, Spain Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Camerlo, who now live in Denver, were notified Monday that their son is among those missing in the ocean tragedy.

A long-time resident of Florence, George attended the elementary schools in the city and later attended the Abbey School in Canon City. When his family moved from Florence several years ago, George enrolled at Cathedral High School in Denver where he was graduated about four years ago.

Upon graduation he entered the navy. He was rated ATN-3 at the time of crash.

In addition to his parents, George is survived by a younger brother, John. His maternal grandmother was the late Kate Kincaid of Florence.

According to the report released by the navy, the bomber, detached from the U. S. naval base at Jacksonville, Fla., was on temporary duty in Western Europe at the time of the crash.

Shortly after the bamber crashed, a massive air-sea search was launched by the navy. Although debris from the plane was sighted in the ocean there were no signs of survivors.

Seven U. S. Navy destroyers, two U. S. Navy patrol planes, a U. S. Navy helicopter, a U. S. Air Force helicopter and a Spanish air force plane bombed the area in a fruitless search for survivors, the navy reported.

Local Residents Accused of Flag Disrepect

"There was a marked disrespect of the Flag when the military parade was held in Colorado Springs Saturday," Lt. Col. Thomas H. Martiniz, retired, president of the Department of Colorado Officers Reserve Association, a patriotic organization, said.

Concerning the etiquette to the National Flag of the United States, Col. Martinez said:

"Patriotism, love of country and respect for the U.S. Flag should always be uppermost in the minds and hearts of the American people. As loyal and patriotic citizens, we should all practice and carry out by example, the basic principles and sublime ideals of Americanism.

"It was very disappointing to see so many American citizens in the Pikes Peak Region on Armed Forces Day, while in attendance at the military parade, fail to salute the American Flag as it passed by.

"The proper method of saluting is as follows:

"During the ceremony of hoisting or lowering the flag, when the National Anthem is played, or when the flag is passing on parade, persons in uniform should render the right hand salute.

"Men, women and children not in uniform, should come to the position of attention, and salute by placing the right hand over the heart until the flag passes by.

"Let's honor and respect the U.S. Flag. It is the national symbol of our great nation and represents the American way of life," the colonel said.

"Long may Old Glory wave, O'er the land of the Free, and the Home of the Brave."

Meany Supports Race Issue for Union Plumbers

NEW YORK (AP) — George Meany, AFL-CIO president, is supporting union plumbers who have refused to work with a Negro and three Puerto Rican plumbers who are not union members.

"This union won't work with non-union men," Meany said Thursday night. He denied that Negroes or Puerto Ricans had been excluded from the union.

The white union plumbers walked off the construction site of the city's $25 million produce market in the Bronx two weeks ago when the four, hired by the contractor, reported for work.

The walkout threatens to stop all work on the project.

President Johnson has asked Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz to investigate.

Meany said the union men are "completely justified in refusing to work."

"There's no law to make them work with non-union men," he said. "There's nothing in Taft-Hartley (law) that compels them to do this. The only thing Taft-Hartley prohibits is a closed shop, and we don't have a closed shop. It would be different if we had kept Negroes and Puerto Ricans out, but we have no record of this. We've taken every Negro and Puerto Rican who applied. These men (the four newcomers) never came near the union."

The four contend the union gave them a "runaround" when they tried to join. The City Commission on Human Rights sent them to the plumbing contractor and reminded the contractor of a clause in city contracts prohibiting discrimination in hiring.

The local involved, No. 2, was where Meany got his start in the the trade union movement. He's been a member nearly 50 years.

The union headquarters in Manhattan has been the target of civil rights demonstrations for several days.

Art Society to Make Annual Selection for FAC Exhibit

The Contemporary Art Society of the Fine Arts Center will hold its annual dinner meeting at 6:30 p.m. Monday, at the Fine Arts Center, to select the society's 1964 art contribution to the permanent collection.

The selection will be made by vote from the collection of contemporary art now on exhibit. Each society member sponsors a painting or sculpture. This year the final choice will be made from the entire collection rather than from a pre-juried group as in past years.

The Contemporary Art Society is composed of individuals and couples interested in both contributing to the Fine Arts Center's permanent collection and in increasing their own understanding and appreciation of contemporary art.

The society will make its selection from an outstanding group of contemporary art works from artists in various parts of the country as well as from this region.

Mr. and Mrs. Norton Bain are co-chairmen of this year's selection arrangements.

Ted Kline was best man and Arthur West Jr. and Jim Garcia were ushers. A reception was held immediately after the wedding.

Double	2 NT	Pass	Pass

Rhythm in the bidding is an insidious thing. Even experienced players with seasoned judgment will frequently be caught in its swing and keep doubling the opposition out of impulse rather than logic. The conviction is held that the enemy is floundering and it becomes [illegible] players will frequently make capital of this psychological weakness by engaging in what is known as round robin bidding, that is, bidding in rapid succession suits which they do not really have, with the expectation of being doubled. After they have repeated the formula for several rounds of bidding, they arrive at long last at the suit in which they desire to play the hand, with the hope that the enemy will have gotten in to the swing and continue to wield the mallet.

There comes to mind a critical hand from an important tournament some time ago. North elected to open the bidding with a club. East chose the "pussyfooting" tactics of merely overcalling with one spade. He was reluctant to make a take-out double for fear that if he did so he would be unable to cope with partner's probable bullish activity in hearts.

The trouble started with the double of one spade, which was bad strategy on South's part. The trouble with doubles of low contracts, when you have nothing but length in the adversely bid suit, is that the hand many times does not play there and your partner will double some other contract depending upon you to take tricks which do not materialize in the play.

North's double of two hearts was natural and East rescued to two notrump with the diamond suit as a backbone. South passed as did West and North made an impulsive double. Brief analysis would have shown that South could not have any strength in diamonds, else he would have doubled the two notrump contract, inasmuch as partner had made it clear that he has the clubs and hearts. The contract was fulfilled with an overtrick.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Never Let It Be Said!

DEAR ABBY: You burn me up! Why do you always take the man's side when wives complain that their retired husbands won't leave them alone? You are greatly in the dark about the habits of retired husbands and how exasperating they can be. Why do you always go to bat for the man? I hope your husband retires and objects to your pecking away at the typewriter; that you never have a minute you can call your own, and that he will be underfoot every step you take. The retired husband who does absolutely nothing can drive his wife crazy. That is my problem. My husband won't let me out of his sight. If I am gone for twenty minutes, he comes looking for me. I am a wreck from my husband's retirement. Men who retire should not bury themselves alive and expect their wives to inhabit the grave with them. Every woman needs a little aloneness. Why not give these lounge monarchs a little advice too? —RETIRED MAN'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: So frequently have I advised retired men to volunteer their services to a worthwhile charity, to interest themselves in church work, civic affairs, politics, gardening, sports, and to make a few friends of their own so they won't be under their wives' feet from sunup 'til sundown, that I fear I have begun to sound like a broken record.

DEAR ABBY: I have always regretted not getting a college diploma. I started in the university, but I quit in my freshman year. I am now 33 years old, and I figured out that if I take courses three evenings a week it will take me eight years to get my diploma. And in eight years I will be 41 years old. Should I? —WANTS A DIPLOMA

DEAR WANTS: And how old will you be in eight years if you DON'T take the courses?

DEAR ABBY: Last week someone poisoned our dog, and if a member of our family had died I don't think I could have felt worse. Our poor dog suffered for days, and we spent a lot of money on vets and buying him pills, only to lose him in the end. I held that sick dog in my arms when he died, and it about tore my heart out to see the pain and agony in his eyes. Why, oh why do people poison pets, Abby? I think a pet poisoner should be tried for murder. —A DAILY READER

DEAR READER: Poisoning a pet, anybody's pet, for whatever reason, is inhumane and inexcusable. But dog owners contribute to the innocent delinquency of their pets when they let them make nuisances of themselves— and prey to the poisoner.

DEAR ABBY: I go with a widow. She is past 60 and so am I. I enjoy her company, but she has a terrible habit. When I take her out to dinner, she opens up her handbag and dumps in all the bread, rolls, crackers and biscuits on the table. She says she will enjoy them for breakfast, and since I am paying for the food served to us, she is entitled to them. I get very much annoyed, and have been tempted to walk out and leave her sitting there. Please print this and tell her that nice people don't do things like that in nice restaurants. Thanks. —B.K.

DEAR B.K.: Warn her once more, and if she doesn't quit, look for someone who is better-bred.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "Wish I Didn't Know" in Philadelphia: I urge you to tell her mother. If she were YOUR daughter, wouldn't you want to know?

PROM QUEEN — Miss Laurel McLeod was crowned Queen of the Cheyenne Mountain High School Junior-Senior Prom, held at the Colorado Springs Country Club. Decorations in the Hawaiian theme were under the direction of Charles Hart, and included a volcano and an Hawaiian throne, palm trees, dancers and leis. The Queen and her attendants were introduced by Jon Ellis, junior class president. Instead of the usual crown, a flower lei was placed around her neck. Miss McLeod, an honor student, was escorted by Ron Todd, and the queen's junior attendants were Susie Bean, Jean Waymire, Carol Gilmore, and Nan Riegel. Senior attendants were Gail Nelson, Lauri Riesen, Sue Prange, and Judi Bartlett. Miss McLeod is a member of the student council and of Teenage Republicans.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

For those who have freezer compartments in their refrigerators . . . and are always "forgetting" or "losing" items:

I place a cookie sheet in the freezer compartment of my refrigerator and put all the frozen foods on it.

All I have to do now is pull out the cookie sheet and "see" what is in the back, etc!

The cookie sheet also keeps the packages of frozen foods from sticking to the freezer.

This idea is wonderful when defrosting the refrig each week.

I can just remove the cookie sheet and have all my frosting compartment unloaded at once, saving the time it takes to "un-pull" those frozen packages from the freezer one by one. —Dee

The cookie sheet is a good idea. We have been experimenting with lining not only the cookie sheet with foil (and it is working) but also the bottom of our freezer compartment and lapping the foil over the edge where the ice forms! Great!

What do you readers think. Do try it and drop us a line on a post card and tell us if you think we are right. We think we are. Write to Heloise care of this paper. Letters do not have to be signed to appear. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Here is a hint for those who may purchase carpeting in the near future, and are in a quandry as to which type to buy—wool, nylon, acrilan, etc.

Buy several carpet samples, one wool, one nylon, etc., and use as doormats or in a heavy traffic area. This way you can see how well each "stands up", which is easier to clean, and which is most suitable for your family and compare the results yourself!

These samples can be bought cheaply, usually on sale for under one dollar. They make wonderful inside door mats—could also be used as car floor mats. I buy my samples the same color as my carpet. —Natalie Hunt

Dear Heloise:

For the lady who is making slip covers for small pillows to take along on vacation, I have a suggestion.

Why not sew strips of cloth about five inches long (double for strength) for handles on two sides of the covers?

I did this when taking my pillows on a trip. Makes it much easier to handle with other luggage. —Hazel Brock

Dear Heloise:

I have always been annoyed after taking a shower or bath when the mirror is so steamed up I can only see a slight image of myself.

It may not be stylish but it certainly is effective.

When you remove the towel you will find the mirror as clean and clear as before putting up the towel. —Janet Metzger

Dear Heloise:

I put the juice of half a lemon in my warm water suds when washing painted or varnished surfaces—then wipe dry. It makes woodwork shine like new. —Veronica Everett

Dear Heloise:

I am one of those people who are "always" caught up on their correspondence.

Want to know how I do it?

I keep stationery, envelopes, stamps, post cards, and spare address books in the glove compartment of my car and whenever there is a time that I am waiting, such as on a rainy day in front of my child's school, or in the doctor's waiting room, or under the dryer at a beauty parlor, I write letters to friends.

You would be amazed at how those spare moments you have in the day can be utilized! — Liz Chapman

Pace Remains Slow in Civil Rights Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate debates civil rights again today—its 56th session devoted to the measure. But the pace is slow, with all forces looking ahead to the important session scheduled for Tuesday.

That's when Republican leaders try to sell their rank and file a package of amendments they think will give the bill a better chance for passage. Until then, there isn't likely to be any dramatic break in routine, with Southern foes continuing to hammer at the bill's lack of a guaranteed trial by jury for those convicted of criminal contempt.

Democrats, minus the Southerners, may meet the same day to talk over the proposed package of amendments by Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois.

Atty. General Robert F. Kennedy has agreed on the language of the amendments, but civil rights leaders have given the proposals a cool reception.

Clarence Mitchell, a spokesman for the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, said Thursday leaders of the group are concerned that some of the proposals may weaken the bill.

Sens. Lister Hill, D-Ala., Spessard Holland, D-Fla., and A. Willis Robertson, D-Va., held the floor for the Southerners Thursday.

Robertson said Dirksen is trying to make sure the bill won't apply to Illinois.

The Virginian was referring to an amendment that would give states which already have antidiscrimination laws original jurisdiction in violation cases.

Holland twitted New York City for what he claimed was an increase in de facto school segregation in recent years and Hill spoke on the lack of jury trial provisions.

Lyndon Attempts To Remain 'Not Yet' Candidate

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) — In this year when noncandidates figure so prominently in the contest for the White House, Lyndon B. Johnson is endeavoring to be the greatest noncandidate as long as possible.

The reasons are made plain by Democratic leaders.

Incumbent presidents traditionally hold the posture of sticking to the nation's business. Election history indicates it is highly effective at the polls.

Johnson has a particular need to follow this course, since he has so short a time in office in which to make a record and give himself a "presidential image."

The President and his top political aides have concluded that 1964 is a year in which American voters for the most part do not wish to be bombarded with heavy political gunfire, but rather prefer to be "left alone."

He and his associates have watched closely the popular response to Republican campaigning by New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater. Their New Hampshire outing struck the Johnson forces as especially persuasive that voters this year are not in a mood to be collared on street corners and in supermarkets.

But if the President's public posture is that of the busy statesman, his behind - the - scenes attitude is totally in tune with political necessities — and has been from the start.

Political memos at a pace of three or four a day began finding their way to Johnson's desk months ago. Early talks with his political helpers indicated he was quickly aware of his need to build strength in the northern big-city states, rich in electoral votes.

The most impressive evidence of that concern: Johnson's designation of Kenneth O'Donnell, a major hold-over from the late John F. Kennedy's regime, to be his key man for all the large northern states.

This choice demonstrates something else, that O'Donnell has the President's full trust, despite his still - continuing strong links with Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and the "Kennedy Group."

In similar high standing is Lawrence O'Brien, whose political organizing talents will be put to use the moment he is freed of his congressional liaison duties.

Whatever Johnson's public utterances about Goldwater's delegate strength, the Democratic leaders are operating on the general assumption that the President's 1964 rival most likely will be a moderate Republican.

They count on Johnson the Southerner winning most if not all of the Old South. They believe a moderate Republican of the Nixon-Scranton-Lodge stripe will have to contest them in the northern industrial zones.

One top Democrat rates Ohio the President's biggest problem, since Kennedy lost it by 273,000 in 1960. It has been more or less continuously beset by Democratic feuding.

This man would place in descending order of "trouble" these other states:

Illinois, where incumbent Democratic Gov. Otto Kerner is under heavy challenge from GOP nominee Charles Percy and where the Chicago organization of Mayor Richard Daley shows signs of age and neglect.

Pennsylvania, if GOP Gov. William Scranton should become his party's presidential nominee.

Michigan, where Detroit's heavy Negro population may not be easily persuaded that Johnson is the civil rights battler they want.

Democratic strategists fully expect the President's phenomenal popularity, as measured in opinion polls, to be modified sharply as soon as the Republicans get their "presidential horse" in mid-July. One man guesses the President's lead percentage will drop to the range of 58 to 42. He adds:

"I can see the headlines saying Johnson has slipped. But it has to come. The present figures are completely unrealistic for a presidential contest."

These same strategists understand further that Johnson's popular status is not of the same order as the late John Kennedy's. Polls show that much of Johnson's support is still thinly based. Fervent attachment is not often evident.

Kennedy, on the other hand, stirred either great emotional support or great dislike. Few were lukewarm about him. He clearly would have been far easier to "sell" in the big cities, though a harder problem elsewhere.

"Nobody is very mad at Lyndon. He is accepted by all kinds of people who would not accept Kennedy."

Another doubts, however, that when the partisan chips are down the businessmen now making friendly sounds about Johnson will continue in his corner. Says he:

"I'm not convinced there is going to be a massive breakthrough in the business community."

The lack of real fervor for Johnson in the big states means Democrats are currently mounting the most exhaustive registration efforts in history. Organization and labor groups from state after state have come to Washington for high-level seminars aimed at pulling them together and spurring fast action.

The key men believe the votes for Johnson the Democrat are there, but that it will be tougher to get them out in the big cities than it would have been for Kennedy. Hence the big early push.

Once the conventions are over, leaders feel it will have to be Johnson the candidate in a big way. Men like Kerner of Illinois need the presidential lift. White House impact could affect countless Senate and House seats.

And it will be time for the President to see what he can really do about romancing the Northern big city voter at close range.

RABBI TALKS TO LUTHERANS

NEW YORK (UPI) —Neither the conversion of the Jew to Christianity nor of the Christian to Judaism is required to fulfill God's plan for salvation, a New York Rabbi told a recent international convocation of Lutheran leaders at Logumkloster, Denmark.

"But it does require our cooperation, our concern for, our joint effort to repair the world," said Rabbi Arthur Gilbert, staff consultant of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. His talk to the first International Consultation of the Lutheran World Federation's Commission on World Mission was made public here by the National Conference.

REFLECTIVE SAFETY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Use of reflective license plates has been one answer to the problem of night rear-end car collisions, according to automotive safety experts.

In a study conducted by Minnesota, deaths from rear-end collisions were reduced from 24 per cent of all accidents to 9 per cent in the first year reflective plates were used by the state, compared with the last year in which non - reflective plates were used.

Federal Disaster Aid Is Asked By Baca County

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The Baca County Drought Disaster Committee has asked for federal drought disaster aid, it was revealed Friday—the first Colorado county to do so this year.

County Extension Agent Thomas J. Doherty told United Press International the committee took the action last week. It was discussed at a public meeting Wednesday night and the committee will meet again to fill out the necessary forms next Monday.

Doherty said the county is asking for emergency livestock feed, emergency authorization to graze soil bank lands and emergency cover crop tillage this fall.

In addition, he said, the Farmers Home Administration has indicated it will request its Washington office to authorize an extension of emergency loans for farmers and ranchers. Baca has been covered under this program, but it is to run out July 1.

Baca was one of several counties which requested federal drought disaster aid last year. The U.S. Agriculture Department denied all the requests. Under USDA procedure the request must go to the state and from there to officials in Washington.

Last year, Gov. John Love approved the requests and sent them on. But later he said he felt many farmers and ranchers in eastern Colorado did not want federal aid. Several months later the USDA denied all the Colorado requests.

Doherty said Baca actually had submitted its request for emergency tillage early this year. It was turned down, he said, re-submitted in March, and turned down again.

FREAK ACCIDENT

HICKORY, N.C. (UPI) — Jesse Lonzo Stewart, 36, was electrocuted on a farm near here Friday in a freak accident which occurred when he and a companion detonated dynamite in a well they were digging.

Officers said the wires leading to the dynamite charge were blown into the air and struck high voltage wires overhead while Stewart was in contact with the triggering device.

The area that is now Brooklyn was settled by the Dutch in the 1630's, and the village of "Brueckien" was founded in 1646.

'Pirate Radio' Shops Open New Methods

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

LONDON (AP) — Two "pirate" radio ships may have opened the way for licensed commercial radio in Britain.

Postmaster General J. Reginald Bevins told Conservative party legislators he had shelved plans for trying to suppress the floating stations, Caroline and Atlanta, broadcasting day and night from the North Sea.

Britain may soon license its own commercial radio, as it did commercial television nine years ago.

Commercial television has proved so popular—and such a rich tax source—that powerful interests are pushing to commercialize radio.

Many radio listeners would like to see a competitor for the government - controlled, noncommercial British Broadcasting Corporation monopoly, which is supported by fees on radio and television sets.

More than 250,000 pounds ($700,000) in English, Irish and Swiss money is reported invested in the Caroline.

When the Caroline began to capture a sizeable audience, the Post Office threatened action on grounds that the broadcasting might be interfering with marine and life-saving services. But this could not be proved.

Then naval action was hinted. Later it was suggested Britain would push for international action through the Council of Europe to outlaw all off-shore broadcasters.

All these threats were finally dropped.

Conservatives want the government to push through commercial radio quickly. They fear that if the heavily-favored Labor party wins the election, the project will be doomed.

Meredith Wilson Gives Fight Song to Academy

HOLLYWOOD (IO) — Composer Meredith Willson said Friday he "had the biggest thrill in the world" when he presented the Air Force Academy with a fight song he recently wrote for the service school.

"It's an adaptation of 'Colorado My Home' from 'The Unsinkable Molly Brown,' " Willson said.

"Kick the tire, light the fire
"Go, go, go, go, go, go go go.
"We'll take on the Navy and Navy day
"We'll take on the Army any day they say.
"We're Air Force Academy
"The AFA
"Colorado's our sky
"The wild blue yonder may be grey or back
"We fly through it anyway so hang on Jack
"We get where we're going and we come on back.
"Colorado's our sky
"Colorado rado, rado
"Sky high."

Wilson, who visited the Academy to present the Cadets with their new song, said, "I think that chapel should be on the front page of our newspapers."

Florence High To Get $3,000 Federal Grant

Florence high school has received word that it has been approved for a $3,000 federal grant to set up a brand, spankin' new general science room to be ready for students next fall, Principal George (Jack) Brown announced this week.

Under provisions of the National Defense Education Act, matching funds are made available to high schools in the fields of math, science and foreign languages wishing to improve these facilities.

Florence high school, which has never had a really good general science lab, applied for funds several months ago. The funds, now approved, will be administered through the Title No. 3 office in Denver through a division of the state department of education.

The new lab will be located on the second floor of the high school. Two large rooms, one used for commercial study and the other in use by the schools annual staff, will be remodeled into one large science room which will be fully equipped with tables and lab equipment, Brown noted.

School district Re-2(J) will match the federal appropriation with $3,000 approved by the board of education.

Fleas Take Big Bow in New 'Color Epic'

By Brenda Warner Rotzoll

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — If you looked at snow last winter and saw tiny white spots jump before your eyes, it was okay.

What you saw were snowfleas.

The microscopic little creatures from the pre-historic days of insectdom unlimbered their built-in pogo sticks and leapt out of the world of mythology into the world of scientific fact once and for all.

What's more, they did it in technicolor.

Because a winter-hardy scientist spent three hours lying on his stomach in a snowbank, the snow-flea never again can be classed in the realm of the type-lice, that non-existent insect that's earned a squirt of ink in the face for countless journeyman printers and reporters.

Nor can Achorutes nivicola be classed any more with the Abominable Snowman of the Himalayas—even if he likes the same sort of weather.

The man who's responsible for this glowing technicolor transformation of legend to demonstrable fact is Kenneth W. MacArthur, curator of entomology at the Milwaukee Public Library.

While other people were home watching the Olympics, MacArthur was out in a Tamarac swamp near Cedarburg, Wis., not far from here, watching the snow-fleas do some jumping that no Olympian could hope to equal, sizewise.

The snow-flea, with whom seeing frequently is not believing, grows at his largest to a full 1-25th of an inch, antennae included. But when he jumps, it's in the big leagues.

"A very conservative estimate has been made that they can jump 250 to 300 times their own length," MacArthur said.

"They do it so very quickly that you see them on the snow and all of a sudden they disappear completely. You don't even see a blur when they've moved," MacArthur said, explaining why people sometimes think they need glasses after observing snow-fleas.

He said snow-fleas "are of interest to the general public because of the peculiar time of the year in which they appear, and because of their equally peculiar now-you-see-it-now-you-don't character."

"There's been a feeling that snow fleas were just a legendary thing in the same category as type lice," the curator observed, "but there actually are such creatures."

And he's got the film to prove it. That time he spent lying in a snowbank was employed in shooting technicolor movies of the jumping snow-flea for pre- speculated that the wild gyra- sentation in a nature series. He tions he filmed were part of a mating ritual.

The snow-flea isn't really a flea at all, but a member of a very primitive group of insects called the Collembola. That group also is known as the "springtail."

The name describes the underslung, lever-like spring called a furcula, which hinges to the snow-flea's abdomen. When he wants to get around in a hurry, the wingless creature pops his spring and is gone literally before you can see him.

MacArthur said the snow-flea might be called "the first animal with a built-in pogo stick," a method of locomotion long since abandoned by the higher order of insects in favor of wings.

The tiny creature isn't a true parasite and doesn't bite man or dog, preferring to live on semi-decayed vegetation imbedded in the snow.

Thirty degrees is just the right temperature for him, and it stays that way under the snow layer for long periods of time, even if it's zero up above the snow crust. At about 30 degrees "outside," he'll start to crawl up to the top of the snow to frolic and that's when you can see him.

A very primitive creature, the snow-flea goes through a gradual metamorphosis without a worm stage, and reverses the habits of the insect world by lying dormant in summer and living it up in winter.

In the days of the ice-box and the early refrigerator, snow-fleas liked to crawl into the insulation of machines that were not perfectly sealed.

But in this day of increasing mechanical perfection, you've got to go out and sit on a snow-bank to see a snow-flea — or else visit the museum to see MacArthur's film, to the best of his knowledge the first epic ever to feature snow-fleas.

Bechtol to Serve Again as Assembly Head

Paul Bechtol was reelected chairman of the Third Congressional District Democratic organization Saturday at the first meeting held since the recent redistricting.

He was elected unanimously and was the only nominee. Other officers elected unanimously were:

Mrs. Frances Carper as vice chairman. She is from Burlington, Kit Carson County, one of the district's newly-added counties.

She succeeds Mrs. Eleanor Barnes of Otero County, who did not seek reelection.

Anthony Velarde, sheriff of Huerfano County, was reelected secretary-treasurer after a move to establish separate offices of secretary and treasurer failed.

The motion to split the office was made by a Pueblo County delegate and seconded by an El Paso County delegate.

John Bennett, El Paso County Democratic chairman, told the delegates that the organization's laws did not provide for a separate office of treasurer.

Bechtol said that the laws also did not preclude the establishment of such an office and that he would not rule the motion out of order.

Sam Taylor, state senator from Huerfano County, asked "What does a treasurer do in such an office?" He pointed out that fund raising is done by committee and state organization as well as county organizations.

Bennett then restated his facts that the laws preclude such an office and pointed out how money is raised and allocated in a congressional district organization. "You just don't have treasurers at this level of organization," Bennett stated.

Both Bennett and Taylor pointed out that basically there would be an extra officer with nothing to do.

Bechtol then called for a show of hands.

The show of hands counted out 11 in favor of two offices and 7 against, but then it was determined that two of the delegates opposed to the splitting of the office also had proxy votes.

This made the score 13 against the split and 11 in favor.

Velarde then was elected unanimously.

He then reported that the organization had $698.80 in the till.

Bechtol said that he hoped to raise $5,000 for the campaign and realized that most of that would have to come from El Paso and Pueblo Counties.

BOLT BARES GUSTAF

ESKILSUNTA, Sweden (UPI) —Railway worker Gustaf Lidstroem, 45, was stripped naked by a lightning bolt which hurled his clothes 20 yards through the air, it was reported today.

He suffered severe burns, and part of his clothing was charred. He was reported in serious condition today.

COOLS OFF

LOURENZO MARQUES, Mozambique (UPI) — Emanouel Zounis jumped overboard from the Greek freighter Anapoli and swam around for two hours before he was picked up by a tugboat. He said he took the swim because he had a "disagreemtnt" with his captain.

Handicapped Find Heritage Of Freedom at Handicamp

By ROBIN TIBBETS
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

"The Easter Seal Handicamp has complete facilities, including a swimming pool, trout pond, riding stable, lodge, recreation hall, infirmary, craft shop, dormitories and 115 acres in a picturesque setting."

That's how the brochure describes it.

But that's not all.

"This camp is one of the few places where crippled children can be happy and carefree, play together, help each other and learn new skills. Their broad smiles show happiness and freedom that is the rightful heritage of any American youth."

That comes pretty close.

But it's still more than that.

It's a place where they can forget their misshapen bodies, their twisted legs, their malformed arms and hands. At the Easter Seal Handicamp, they can forget their crutches and their wheel chairs and learn to ride horseback or swim or follow the trail of a fox or rabbit.

They learn how to cook out in the open over a dancing fire; they discover the secret of catching a big trout that lurks in a shady pool; they find out how the Indians built fires, made clay pots and fashioned bows and arrows.

If they have a flair for drama, these youngsters are given the opportunity to act in plays. If they want to paint or to make leather billfolds or to learn how birds make their nests, they're given those opportunities, too.

And just for fun, they can pet the tiny Shetland pony donated to the camp by Dolores McMenemy of Colorado Springs who won the pony in a contest conducted by Gene's Acquarium.

They may go to camp on crutches and in wheel chairs. They may wear braces on their arms, legs and backs. They may be young adults with retarded mental processes. But when they go to the Easter Seal Handicamp, they are transformed into the children whose ". . . broad smiles show happiness and freedom that is the rightful heritage of any American Youth," as former President Eisenhower described them.

A few days at the Easter Seal Handicamp is a bright spot in the life of a mentally or physically handicapped person. It's an excellent opportunity for such a person to learn self reliance and self confidence. It's a real vacation, the kind to which every youngster looks forward.

The folks back home need not worry about their youngster who goes to the Handicamp. Professionally trained leaders offer every opportunity for participation in many healthful, educational and social activities. Through all activities, responsibility for the common good, respect for other persons and the application of the Golden Rule is kept foremost. The camp's program is a safe, enjoyable activity which is designed to better serve parents and children.

A registered nurse is in camp at all times. Daily health inspections are made and a licensed doctor is on call for any emergencies. If children need special medication, this should be noted on the application.

Eliminated this year is parents visiting day. Parents are encouraged to bring their children to camp and pick them up at the end of their two weeks stay.

Sessions for 1964 open June 14. The first session, which ends June 27, is for mentally retarded boys and girls, ages 7 through 14. The second session begins June 28 and ends July 11 and is for boys and girls ages 7 through 9 who are physically handicapped.

July 12 is the opening date for the third session, and it extends through July 25. This session is for boys and girls physically handicapped, ages 10 through 12.

Boys and girls who are physically handicapped and are from age 13 through 17 will attend the fourth session, July 26-Aug. 8.

The fifth session opens Aug. 9 and closes Aug. 15 and is for young adults, men and women, who are mentally retarded and whose ages are 15 through 25.

The sixth session, which extends Aug. 16-22, is open to young adults, male and female, who are physically handicapped. Age limits are 18 through 25.

The final session opens Aug. 23 and ends Sept. 5, and is a seniors camp for adults.

Camp fee for the first four sessions is $85 plus a $5 registration fee. The registration fee covers the camp accident insurance, store, T-shirt and other items. Camp fee for the fifth and sixth sessions is $45. Session seven is a special one conducted in cooperation with the Mile-Hi Seniors Group and the Denver Parks and Recreation Department.

It should be emphasized that no child or adult is refused admission because an inability to pay the camp fee.

Volunteer camp director for this year is Bob Russel of Colorado Springs.

Applications may be obtained through Richard E. Olson, Jr., director of the Rocky Mountain Rehabilitation Center in Colorado Springs. Olson said the center would do all in its power to help make arrangements for local youngsters and adults who fit the requirements to attend the camp, the requirements being that they be either mentally retarded or physically handicapped.

The Easter Seal Handicamp has 16 head of riding stock, including two Mexican burros. For the youngsters who cannot ride horseback, a buckboard pulled by Shetland ponies is provided.

Error Made In Sermon Date Announcement

Wayne Nelson, a senior at Wayland Baptist College, Plainview, Tex., will not preach at the Bellevue Baptist Church today, as erroneously announced. It is next Sunday, May 24, that he is to deliver both morning and evening sermons, in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Wayne Williams, who will be attending the annual meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention in Atlantic City.

Nelson is a former member of the local church. He is captain of the Wayland Baptist College debate team and is active in student activities. He formerly served with the 4600 Air Base Wing, Ent Air Force Base.

Democratic Assembly Set For Pueblo

The Democratic assembly of the Third Congressional District will be held July 11 in Pueblo, it was decided at a meeting held in the Antlers Hotel Saturday.

Saturday meeting was the first for the Democrats of the newly-enlarged district. The district was changed in the recent state reapportionment which was passed by a special session of the state legislature and signed by Gov. John A. Love.

A showdown that was presaged at the Saturday meeting will take place at the July 11 assembly when Hugh Ross of Colorado Springs and Frank Evans of Pueblo seek top support from the delegates.

Top support means top spot on the ballot for the primary election set for Sept. 8. At that time the Democrats in the district will select a candidate to oppose incumbent Rep. J. Edgar Chenoweth, Republican who has represented this district for 24 years.

Ross and Evans spoke at a luncheon held in the hotel after the meeting.

Ross told the delegates "I believe that our party must go to the people on sound and constructive issues, and not solely on the ground of criticizing the actions of our opponents."

Ross said that was particularly true since the Democratic party is the minority party in the district.

He added, "I have confidence in the people and their understanding of conditions such that they would prefer to hear a candidate discuss the issues and what the candidate intends to ton Kit Carson County, one of do to improve conditions and what the candidate intends to what the cost will be — rather than having the candidate complaining about what the opposition has done to their injury."

"This should apply to all party spokesmen," Ross said.

Evans said that he found a renewed purpose among the Democratic and independent voters in the newly-enlarged district.

He said that he has devoted all of his time to compaigning since announcing his candidacy about two months ago.

He was enthusiastic about the reaction he has received as he traveled around the district, he stated.

Evans said that he believed he could give the district better representation than it has in past years.

Both Ross and Evans are lawyers. Ross recently completed a term as county commissioner. Evans has served in the state assembly for four years.

FORGETFUL DAY

LEOTI, Kan. (AP)—Murle M. Hayden used a pair of pliers and a piece of wire to fish the ignition keys out of his closed and locked car.

In the process the pliers and wire were put on a car fender and forgotten.

MY ANSWER

by Billy Graham

© 1964 by Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: I am only three years old as a Christian. I have a terrific inferiority. I have been asked to teach a Sunday School class, but there are so many others who are better qualified. Is there any hope for me? —M. R. B.

ANSWER: It's the people who feel no inferiority who have problems. It is normal to feel inferior because we "are" inferior. In comparison to the great universe we live in, we are very small. In comparison to Christ we are weak and unqualified.

However, this doesn't mean that we can do nothing. As children of God, we become working partners with Him, and if we seek His guidance He gives us strength to serve Him.

If I had folded my hands whenever I had feelings of inferiority, I would have done nothing. You must claim the promise, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." The electric wire is nothing by itself. But when it is properly connected to the current, it can illuminate a room, pump water, or do the washing. In ourselves we are nothing, but if we are connected to God's power, we become conductors of His love and grace.

Take the Sunday school class. The people who asked you to take it have confidence in you. As you teach others, you will learn and grow—and they will be blessed by your ministry.

QUESTION: I need to know how to find God; and once I have found Him, how do I make Him a part of my everyday life?

ANSWER: Yours is the heart-cry of the ages. Job said, "O, that I might find Him . . ." And David said, "As the hart panteth after the waterbrook, so my soul panteth after thee, O God." So you see that you are in good company.

You state in your letter that you are young. I am glad that you are seeking God early in life. Too many wait until they get one foot in the grave, and then in desperation, they try to do in a moment what they should have been doing all their lives.

Proverbs 8:17 says, "Those that seek me early shall find me." Habits are established early in life.

How do you find God? First, He is seeking you—this is what the cross means—but in another sense you are to seek Him. "Seek the Lord while He may be found, call ye upon Him while He is near." Second, confess your sins. "Your sins have separated between you and your God," said Isaiah. Third, believe and receive His promises. One cannot mistrust a friend and expect a good relationship to be established. The same goes for God. He has said, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." Believe that; act upon that! He has also said, "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." The "whosoever" is you, and the Lord is One who has never failed to keep His promise, and He won't begin with you.

QUESTION: I hear you speak of "making a decision." For the life of me I can't see where making a choice can change one's life. Will you please explain? —G. B.

ANSWER: Making a choice—just any kind of choice, cannot change your life. It is the kind of redemptive choice, the one that our Lord commends, that can make your life full, and abundant.

Herbert Agar once said, "We have forgotten that man is creating his tomorrow at every moment by his thoughts and motives today." Look at your own life. Where you have triumphed over temptation; wherever you have curbed a bad disposition; wherever you have been strong instead of weak, you have enriched your character.

Nations and individuals map their future by today's choices. When Germany endorsed Hitler, they went a certain direction that was dictated by that choice. When Russia chose communism, they mapped out a certain kind of future for themselves. When we choose Christ; decide for Him, His grace, His love, His power begin to play a part in our lives. Our lives take on a new quality. We can never be quite the same again. The decisions of today, right or wrong, determine what our tomorrows shall be. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God . . . and all these things shall be added unto you."

Nuns Battle U.S. Army Over Fishing Pond Rights

By TOM A. CULLEN

DACHAU, West Germany (NEA) —The United States 7th Army in Germany usually picks adversaries that are made of sterner staff than catholic nuns.

But here in Dachau, of evil Nazi memory, the 7th Army has taken on not only the sisters of the Carmelite order, but the 77-year-old auxiliary bishop of Munich as well.

The dispute concerns a fishing pond.

The fishing pond lies partly on that portion of the former Dachau Nazi concentration camp, which the 7th Army — with what seems to be incredible bad taste—has turned into a disciplinary training center.

Another part of the pond lies on the site where the Carmelite nuns are completing a new convent. When finished this autumn, the convent will house 21 nuns who wish to devote their lives to doing penance for the crimes committed on this spot. (More than 29,000 prisoners of all nationalities died in this notorious camp.)

The tussle between the American armed forces and the Catholic nuns would appear to be rather onesided, for the Carmelites have taken the vow of silence. But the sisters have found an able and vocal champion in Johann Neuhausler, the auxiliary bishop of Munich.

Bishop Neuhausler knows Dachau well, having spent nearly four years here as a prisoner of Hitler. Today, at 77, he is a spry man, with the red weathered face of a peasant.

"The Carmelite sisters need the little fishing pond to supplement their diet," he explained.

At present, the sisters are confined to 12 acres which the bishop bought with donations. But this, he points out, is barely big enough to accommodate the convent chapel, kitchen, dining hall, heating plant, and the tiny cells where the nuns do their penance.

The bishop has the option to buy some adjoining ground now occupied by the 7th Army. On this additional land the nuns could grow a few vegetables as well as stock the pond with fish. But the 7th Army shows no signs of budging.

"The American Army is full of men of good will, but they are slow in moving," the bishop complained. "So far, they have not even considered our request to evacuate this little piece of land.

"Meanwhile, our convent is nearly finished, and the nuns would like to move in."

As it is at present, only a wide fence separates the GIs from the Carmelites.

Many Germans I have talked to do not understand what the Americans are doing at Dachau in the first place. To them it seems a tactless blunder to locate an American disciplinary stockade next to the brick ovens used by the Nazis. It shows a complete lack of sensitivity to local feeling, they claim.

In barracks formerly occupied by the Hitler SS troops, GI offenders serving sentences of three months or more are held under close guard. In fact, it has become a standing joke in the 7th Army to remark, "If you're not careful you'll be sent to Dachau."

Meanwhile, a few Carmelites have volunteered to work alongside the brick-layers and carpenters on the building site in order to hasten the completion of their convent.

Bishop Neuhausler, who is patron of the Carmelite order, was the leader of the Catholic resistance to the Nazis in Bavaria. He was arrested by the Gestapo in 1941 and sent to Dachau as Prisoner No. 26680. Among his fellow prisoners were Pastor Martin Niemoller and the bishop of Clermont-Ferrand in France.

In recent years the Munich bishop has been active in preserving Dachau — brick ovens, torture instruments, human ashes and all as a permanent reminder of the atrocities committed there.

He was also instrumental in having the Church of Christ in Agony erected on the grounds of Dachau as a monument of atonement. This church, which was opened by the bishop in 1960, is a simple affair built of unhewn rocks, resembling a gigantic barrel open on one side. It is surmounted by a crown of thorns made from pieces of rusted metal.

"When I die I have requested that my body be buried alongside this chapel," the bishop declared. "But in the meantime there is work to be done."

Academy Cadets Take Cruise To Safety

Over 500 land locked "sailors" at the Air Force Academy were taken on a "cruise to safety" this week.

A total of 500 NCOs and airmen from Headquarters Squadron sailed through a water safety program featuring a lecture by Tom Roath, owner of a Denver marine supply firm.

Active in water safety activities throughout the Rocky Mountain area, Roath is a member of the American Power Boat Association, the Board of Directors of the National Outboard Association, the Legislative Task Force of the Outboard Boating Club of America, and the Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Johnson Victory Predicted by Huerfano Senator

"President Lyndon B. Johnson will carry Colorado this fall and at the same time the Democrats should gain control of the state House of Representatives," Sam Taylor said here Saturday.

Taylor, a state Democratic senator from Huerfano county, spoke at a meeting of the Third Congressional District Democratic organization held in the Antlers Hotel.

While predicting those victories, Taylor also pointed out that it was doubtful if the Democrats could gain control of the Colorado Senate.

Further, he pointed out that it will be difficult for Democrats to defeat incumbent Republican Rep. J. Edgar Chenoweth for the U.S. House seat this fall.

Taylor said that the counties added to the district in the recent reapportionment came from a Republican district. "That will not make our task any easier," he cautioned.

On the state level, Taylor said that the Democrats are in an excellent spot.

"The Republicans have been utterly lacking in program. They have offered nothing constructive. I have never seen them so disorganized and indecisive," he said.

"We Democrats should hammer home to the voters just how divided the Republicans are," he said.

Speaking of the reapportioned state, Taylor said, "Time will tell, but I don't like the present redistricting."

He said that it was his opinion that a state legislature could reapportion the state any year, and did not have to wait for a census year to do it. (Census years come every 10 years, 1950 - 1960 and 1970.)

He was apparently implying that if the Democrats gained sufficient strength in the next election or two that they might again reapportion the state.

The recent reapportionment of the state was the first in almost 50 years.

Taylor said that Democratic candidates this year should point out that the obstructionist movements in the state assembly this year were by Republicans who differed with each other and with Gov. John A. Love.

If its water were harnessed, the Congo River system could increase Africa's power capacity 13 times, says National Geographic Magazine.

New Vaccine Could Mean End of Measles Threat

Colorado Medical Society

The tool is in hand.

It is now conceivable that another infectious disease, measles, can be eliminated as a threat to children. (And adults; measles in grownups can be a very serious illness.)

Within the past five years, a safe and effective vaccine against measles has been developed which offers close to 100 per cent protection. It is now readily available, and it is recommended for every susceptible child between the ages of 9 months and 14 years with a few specific exceptions.

Colorado had a leading part in the field trials which proved the new vaccine safe and effective. During 1961 and 1962, approximately 9000 children in Denver, Colorado Springs and Boulder received the vaccine without ill effect. Today, more than 1½ million American children, and millions more throughout the world, have been vaccinated against measles.

In the United States, measles has not been the fatal disease it has been elsewhere in the world. In India, for example, 1 in every 300 babies dies of bacterial pneumonia as a complication of measles, probably because widespread malnutrition leaves Indian children susceptible to gastrointestinal disease and pneumonia infections.

Here in the United States, measles ordinarily produces a week or more of sickness, absence from school, discomfort, but the death rate has been low. Between 5 and 15 per cent of American children suffer some degree of bacterial complications of measles, and in about 1 in 1000 cases a measles encephalitis develops, with 15 per cent mortality and 40 per cent permanent brain damage. Measles encelphalitis is one of the main reasons for the vaccination of American children.

Even in America, measles is a much more severe and dangerous disease in children under 4, and studies have shown that in fully half of all children with uncomplicated measles temporary brain wave changes can be found by electroencephalograph (EEG) tests.

There is thus good reason to attempt to eradicate this childhood disease.

It should be emphasized that the vaccine is effective only against "true" measles, also called 10-day, "hard," or "red," measles. It offers no protection against German measles, sometimes called rubella or 3-day measles, the disease which has reached epidemic proportions in Colorado and elsewhere in the nation earlier this spring. The two types of measles are caused by different viruses, and to date no vaccine has been developed against German measles.

The vaccine against true measles is available both as a live and as a killed virus vaccine, and the live vaccine, since it is more effective and longer lasting, is recommended for most children. All the vaccine now available has been derived from one culture of virus obtained from a 14-year-old Baltimore boy with a "classic" case of measles. The virus obtained from him since has been passed through many tissue cultures to reduce its virulence and "tame" it for vaccination use.

As now available, the vaccine can be given to the vast majority of healthy children. The initial mass tests showed that about 80 per cent of those vaccinated experienced some fever, about 15 per cent of which went above 103 degrees, and approximately half acquired a short-lived rash.

It was then found that by giving a simultaneous shot of gamma globulin in the other arm, the incidence of fever could be cut to about half and only 10 to 15 per cent of children would get a rash. Gamma globulin, the fraction of the blood which contains antibodies against disease, long has been used to modify severe cases of measles.

The measles vaccine is not given to babies under 9 months because they do not get a good "take" and acquire only low levels of antibodies against the measles virus. It also cannot be given to children with leukemia, to those who are taking cortisone-like drugs, or those who suffer from any disturbance in the mechanism of antibody formation. It should not be given to pregnant women, since it is know that measles can result in premature labor, and perhaps not to patients with tuberculosis. Natural measles, it is known, complicates TB.

In all other patients — the great majority — measles vaccine produces a 95 to 97 per cent immunity for 4 years or longer. It is possible that time may prove that a single vaccination will be sufficient for a lifetime.

For the patients who cannot take live vaccine, a killed virus vaccine has been developed. It is somewhat less effective — although 90 per cent of the patients vaccinated develop antibodies against measles — and more than half of those vaccinated lose their immunity in the first year. Revaccination thus is necessary for these children.

Live virus measles vaccine is relatively expensive to produce because of the multiple tissue cultures in which it is grown. It comes in the form of a powder which must be kept refrigerated. The doctor mixes the powder into a solution for injection.

Old Doc Experience answers some of the questions most frequently asked about the new vaccine:

1. Does my child need it?

Yes, if he is between the ages of 9 months and 15 years and has not had measles, is not taking cortisone, does not have leukemia and does not have an antibody formation problem.

2. What is the vaccine?

In its most effective form, it is a strain of attenuated (weakened) live measles virus. These viruses, on injection, provoke the body into formation of antibodies which specifically attack this specific virus. These antibodies remain in the blood for at least 4 years and perhaps longer, thus conferring immunity to any further invasions of the measles virus.

3. Shouldn't I wait until an even better measles vaccine is developed?

No, unless you want to subject your child to the hazard of measles in the meantime. An improved vaccine is being developed in the laboratories, but it is at least two years away.

Medicare Action Possible on Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chances for congressional action this year on health care of the aged are being rated higher on Capitol Hill with the report the House Ways and Means Committee is considering components of a possible bill.

The plan being sketched—still without anyone committed to sponsor it — has little resemblance to the Social Security-financed hospitalization plan President Johnson and the late President John F. Kennedy asked for. It would build instead on the existing Kerr-Mills Act under which a number of state programs help meet the medical bills of aged persons not so poor as to qualify for general relief.

But the program being talked about would so expand the Kerr-Mills system as virtually to transform it into a guarantee of state-federal medical care help for anyone over 65 who, without such aid, is in danger of being pushed into need by high medical bills.

The administration program is locked up in the committee. The majority against it includes the key figure of the chairman, Wilbur Mills, D-Ark. But Mills is understood to be encouraging the committee to consider possible changes in the program he helped enact, although he had not endorsed any of them.

As sources described the proposed revision, it would get away from the present requirement that an aged person must be close to the level of actual need before he received any health care assistance. Instead, each state would establish an income level to be maintained against the cost of health care. For example, the level might be set at $2,500, but an older person with income of $3,500 could get help—if his medical bills exceeded $1,000. The plan would pick up the whole bill for those with income below $2,500.

Setting the cutoff point would still be a state prerogative, but the plan would contemplate encouraging liberal standards by paying states which adopted them a bigger proportionate federal contribution.

In any case, the federal contribution would be stepped up to encourage more comprehensive programs and to attract into the system states that have so far not implemented the Kerr-Mills Act.

The expenses eligible for payment under the proposal would not be limited to hospital and nursing home costs, as in the administration bill, but would cover doctor and medicine charges. This might attract some members of both Congress and the executive branch who have insisted on the Social Security principle—they might argue that, at least potentially, the alternate plan is more generous.

There was also talk that a minimum participation by Social Security might be worked in. The committee is considered likely, whatever it may do about medical care, to recommend an increase in Social Security old age payments. There might be a move to earmark part of such an increase for hospital insurance.

Sources who described the stage that discussions have reached behind the committee's closed doors emphasized that everything is tentative; no one is committed, and there probably will be no votes for at least a week.

Singer Dinah Shore Sues for Divorce

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — Singer Dinah Shore Friday sued her second husband, Maurice Smith, for divorce in Indio, Calif. The couple have resided for the past year in nearby Palm Springs.

Miss Shore's suit said her contractor-husband caused her "great and grievous mental anguish and suffering." She and Smith were married May 26, 1963, and separated five days ago, the complaint said.

Miss Shore divorced cowboy actor George Montgomery May 9, 1962, after 18 years of marriage. She has two children, Melissa Ann, 16, and John David Montgomery, 9.

WE CAME FROM MONTANA—A beautiful pair of Canadian lynx has taken up residence at the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo. These 30 inch long, 40 pound members of the cat family were captured near Hungry Horse, Montana by trapper, Henry Belston. Lynx are reddish brown in color and possess a short tail similar to that of the bobcat. Other characteristics are the extra large feet which act as snowshoes in the winter, and the long tufts of hair which protrude from their ears. Their territories are the deep forests and swamps of Canada and the northern United States where they feed principally on the snowshoe hare. These are the first Canadian lynx ever exhibited at the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo.

Naval Reservist Trains in California

Annual two weeks active duty for training was recently completed by Naval Reserve Commander Marion F. Sanders of 1013 N. Star Dr. at a Naval installation in California.

During 50 weeks of the year, Sanders works as a Civil Service employee of the Air Defense Command. Commander Sanders' local Naval affiliation is a member of Colorado Springs Naval Reserve Research Company 9-26.

The whole company recently spent a weekend at the McDonnell Aircraft Company in St. Louis. They were provided information on and examined the Gemini two man space capsule.

The Naval Reserve Research Company meets Tuesday evenings at the Naval Reserve Training Center at Lake and Logan on the south side of Prospect Lake.

Any Naval Reservist not presently affiliated with an active Navy Reserve group is invited to join. Additional information may be obtained by calling the Navy Training Center, 632-7421.

Lions Club Celebrate Charter Night

Academy Group Discusses Laser as Surgical Tool

Several improvements in a laser instrument used for surgery within the eye were announced today by Dr. H. MacKenzie Freeman and his co-workers (Retina Foundation, Boston, Mass.) at the final session of the two-day Conference on The Laser, sponsored by The New York Academy of Sciences and held at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Recently the laser has been employed to "spot weld" detached retinas to prevent further detachment and loss of vision. In the improved ruby laser instrument developed by Dr. Freeman and his co-workers, the welded spot can be made wider without being made deeper, by using lenses to spread the laser beam, Dr. Freeman said.

They were able to obtain beams of uniform intensity by water-cooling the ruby, and by employing electronic signaling devices to prevent premature "firing" of the laser beam.

When operating on the back wall of the eyeball, the researcher can fairly easily direct the beam into the eye. But when working off to the side or on the roof or floor of the eyeball, it is sometimes difficult to direct the beam through the pupil without touching the iris.

This causes the iris to clamp down and make the pupil small, so that surgery cannot be completed. To avoid this complication, the doctors at the Retina Foundation placed a diaphragm in the path of the beam to shield the iris.

The laser can injure as well as heal, and permanent blindness can follow accidental exposure to beams from ruby and neodymium lasers. "It is imperative, therefore, that personnel operating in areas of laser activity wear suitable protective eye shields," Dr. H. W. Straub (Harry Diamond Laboratories, Washington, D. C.) told the Conference. Many devices have been developed to protect the eyes against nuclear flashes.

The only safe device against the laser, Dr. Straub believes, is Jena color glass BG-18. This glass has been employed in the manufacture of goggles which are effective against the ruby and neodymium lasers as well as against the gallenium arsenide laser.

The conference was informed that Dr. C. J. Campbell and his co-workers (Columbia University, New York City and American Optical Co., Southbridge, Mass.) have successfully treated small tumors within the eye with laser light rays.

Other researchers told of promising results obtained by using the laser on transplanted tumors in animals. Among them were Drs. E. Klein (Roswell Park Memorial Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.) and S. Fine (Northeastern University, Boston, Mass.).

These researchers also directed laser rays at the heads of normal mice. The mice developed brain damage and died. Directed at the chest and abdomen, the rays produced more severe damage within their bodies than on the surface. Black mice grew white hair after irradiation, and blood clots occurred in apparently unharmed blood vessels.

Drs. J. A. Kochen and S. Baez (Albert Einstein College of Medicine, New York City) told the Conference how, by using a miniature ruby laser, they caused minute injuries in tiny blood vessels in the abdominal membranes of rats.

While observing the blood vessel under the microscope, they focused the laser beam on a spot smaller in diameter than a red blood cell. Motion pictures were then taken of the changes that occurred in the blood vessels. With beams of low intensity, muscles around the blood vessels contracted. With a stronger beam, a tiny injury was formed on the inner surface of the vessel. Blood cells quickly stuck to the injured site.

As the clump of cells increased in size it either broke off and was washed downstream, or plugged the vessel completely. Very quickly, little canals were formed through the obstruction and blood flow was restored. When a very intense laser beam was used, the blood flow was restored. When a very intense laser beam was used, the blood vessel broke down completely and hemorrhage into the surrounding tissue occurred.

Drs. M. Bessis (Paris, France) and M. T. Pogossian (Washington University Medical School, St. Louis, Mo.) "took aim, shot, and killed" single white blood cells and one-celled animals with a miniature laser beam. They used a television system to observe how the other cells reacted to the dead bodies.

In order to kill the cells, they had to color them first with dyes. They could even dye parts of the cells and destroy only the dyed parts.

Dr. N. M. Saks and his co-workers (New York University, New York City) succeeded in maiming amoebas (one-celled animals) by shooting them with repeated small doses of laser light rays which alter the protein molecules within the cell. In another experiment they repetitively irradiated the nuclei of amoebas. After this treatment, the amoebas multiplied more slowly.

Using a laser beam on "Spirogyra"—algae which form green scum on ponds — Dr. Saks and his co-workers drilled holes through their thick cell walls. Then they were able to insert tiny needles into these living cells for further surgery.

Working with tissue cultures, Dr. D. E. Rounds (Pasadena Foundation for Medical Research, Pasadena, Calif.) showed that cells containing pigment are more sensitive to laser beams than non-pigmented cells.

Isolated heart cells from chick embryos were changed by the laser beams so that they did not beat as rapidly as before irradiation.

Persistent changes in the number and shape of chrmosomes occurred in tissue cultures subjected to laser irradiation, which suggests that these rays can cause mutations.

Summing up the applications of the laser to biology and medicine, Conference Chairman Dr. L. Goldman (University of Cincinnati, Ohio) said, "the era of the laser in medical research and surgery has clearly begun." He added, however, "For the clinical phases of bio-medical application of the laser, the research will continue to be prolonged and expensive."

Sky High Ranch Ready for Scout Troop Camping

The camping season is upon us and the Girl Scouts — Wagon Wheel Council is not exception. Besides day camp close at hand for all scouts and the opportunities offered by troop camping, established camping at beautiful Sky High Ranch is also offered.

Situated about eight miles from Woodland Park and bordering on the Pike National Forest, Sky High Ranch offers opportunities to girl scouts to enjoy a full camping program at nominal cost. Nature, skills, cookouts, crafts, conservation projects, trail rides and campfires are but a few of the exciting activities awaiting the young girl from fourth grade through high school level.

Sessions are still open for registration during the following weeks: Primitive unit, July 3-14; other 12 day sessions are June 20-July 1, June 28- July 9, July 3-14, July 11-22, July 16-27, July 25-Aug. 4, July 29-August 9.

Registered girl scouts will be given preference in applying for camp sessions. However, non-scouts who would like this extensive and active camping program of skills and out-door fun may also apply. Any girl who has completed third grade and up may register.

Sky High Ranch is a member of the American Camping Association. The fact that this camp meets the high standards of the ACA and the Girl Scout organization assures all girls of high quality activities, excellence of camp leadership, and a program that incorporates sound health and safety measures.

Primitive camping offers special challenges to the advanced campers to live and work together in the out-of-doors. Overnight and trail rides, offered to Cadette and Senior age level girls, provides another opportunity to develop special skills and interests.

Well qualified and specially trained counselors help all girls to learn new skills and find new adventures. In each age level—Junior, Cadette and Senior — units of 16-24 girls assures good unit management, a chance to work in patrols and still enjoy the individuality and freedom important in a well-rounded camping program.

Church services are arranged for Protestant and Catholic girls. A trading post is maintained for the convenience of campers needing small items.

For further information on registration, fees, transportation, health and safety standards, a call to the Girl Scout Council Headquarters is suggested. Telephone number for the Wagon Wheel Council is 632-6615. Registration deadline is June 1.

Rocky to Hear State of World From Officials

By LARRY OSIUS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson administration turns out its top-level officials today to give Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller an insider's look at U.S. security problems and world affairs.

The New Yorker thus becomes the first of the contenders for the Republican presidential nomination to take up President Johnson on his offer of intelligence briefings.

Rockefeller, fresh from his campaign for votes in today's Oregon preferential primary, is to be briefed at the State Department by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Undersecretary of State George W. Ball, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and John A. McCone, Central Intelligence Agency director.

Johnson made the briefing offer to "major candidates for the office of president" in a New York speech April 20. He said he did so because "those who seek to discuss great public issues must be informed of those issues."

Rockefeller accepted with the provision that it would not hamper his criticism of administration policies.

But Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, Rockefeller's chief announced rival for the GOP nomination, rejected the offer. He said too much political use had been made of security information already, and suggested Johnson withhold the offer until after the candidates are nominated.

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who counts himself as available but not an active seeker for the nomination, rejected the offer on much the same grounds as Goldwater.

But Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine and Harold E. Stassen, both announced candidates, said they would like to receive briefings. There has been no announcement as to whether or when they would.

Leaders in several camps were assessing former President Dwight D. Eisenhower's statement Thursday that he will keep hands off the GOP race.

The consensus: Goldwater benefitted most from the statement, and if Eisenhower changes his stand, it probably won't be before the convention in July.

Some party leaders have been saying privately that Eisenhower might spearhead a drive to stop or slow down Goldwater who has a big lead over other potential nominees in accumulating delegate votes for the GOP convention opening July 13 in San Francisco.

There have been persistent but unconfirmed reports that Eisenhower would prefer a nominee other than the conservative Arizona senator. But in a news conference at Harrisburg, Pa., Thursday Eisenhower said he won't try to block any of the potential nominees.

"I am hoping everybody will have a clear field and I want to see an interesting convention," he said. "It is simply that I don't want to do anything that I think would be divisive in the party. I am going to support anyone the nominating convention selects."

Atlas Missile Site Destroyed in Blast

FREDERICK, Okla. (AP) — An explosion and fire destroyed a $5-million Atlas missile site near this southwest Oklahoma town Thursday.

Twenty men, four of the missile crew members of the Air Force, were completing the final phase of a modification program when the evacuation alarm sounded. All escaped without injury.

There was no nuclear device involved in the fire, a spokesman said. Crewmen said they felt only a thump in the control center, separated by blast proof doors from the silo, when the explosion occurred.

It was reported in Washington fire broke out during fueling operations. The Air Force there said an investigating team will probe the mishap.

Big Battle Reported In Viet Nam Jungle

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Western military sources say some 300 men of the rightwing army were killed or wounded in a battle with pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces in a remote jungle near the border with Communist North Viet Nam.

Some 300 to 400 anti-Communist tribesmen also were reported killed.

If confirmed, it would be the largest number of casualties in a single engagement of the Laotian civil war. Battle casualties in the dozens have been the rule.

More Court Rulings Are Seen for Civil Rights

By PAUL M. YOST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten years after its historic decision against racial segregation in public schools, the Supreme Court is due to follow up with more landmark rulings in the difficult civil rights field.

Any Monday before term-closing day in June, the high tribunal may decide the fate of several thousand Negroes and whites arrested for sit-in demonstrations at Southern lunch counters and other private business places.

The troublesome issue that confronts the nine justices is validity under the constitution of the use of state criminal trespass laws to enforce private discrimination.

Equally difficult is a pending case from Prince Edward County in Virginia, where schools were closed in 1959 to avoid court-ordered admission of Negroes to classes.

The justices have been asked to order the county to levy taxes for desegregated schools, and to declare unconstitutional the closing of county schools while public schools elsewhere in Virginia remain open.

The Prince Edward case was one of the original school segregation cases decided by the Supreme Court on May 17, 1954, and some court observers have predicted that the case may be acted on finally next Monday—10 years and a day after the first momentous ruling.

Chief Justice Earl Warren a decade ago pronounced the fateful words that "separate educational facilities are inherently unequal." He declared for a unanimous court that Negroes cannot legally be barred from public schools because of race.

Numerous lawsuits followed in lower federal courts as Negro parents and Negro organizations pressed for compliance with the decree. The Supreme Court mostly let the lower courts struggle with the cases until recently. Then it heard arguments in the Prince Edward Case and in another appeal involving Atlanta.

The latter case, also up for decision in May or June, questions the validity of Atlanta's gradual desegregation plan that started from the top down, beginning with the 11th and 12th grades.

While school cases worked their way through the lower courts, the high tribunal in the last decade took on and decided numerous disputes in the civil rights field that appeared to be sparked by the 1954 segregation ruling. Time and again final decisions in that field hinged on a basic holding that any activity having a government connection must be open to Negroes and whites without discrimination.

For instance, just a year ago the court called for immediate desegregation of parks, playgrounds and other city recreational facilities in Memphis. The city had pleaded in vain for use of a program of gradual desegregation. Earlier, Atlanta was told to allow Negroes to use its public golf course and Baltimore was directed to allow both races to use public parks and pools.

In a case from Wilmington, Del., the court ordered Negroes admitted to a privately operated restaurant in a state-owned building devoted largely to car parking. Authority of Colorado's antidiscrimination commission to order job-tests for a Negro pilot was upheld and Richmond, Va., was told it could not require Negroes to sit in a special section in its traffic court.

A major victory for campaigners against racial discrimination was a Warren opinion of last May. He declared then that state laws, city ordinances and statements by their officials are totally ineffective to bar Negroes from peaceful sit-in demonstrations in public business places.

The sit-in cases now pending before the court for decision raise the question of what to do about arrests in instances where there are no such laws or statements by public officials.

Another major victory in the efforts to crack segregation barriers was Supreme Court reversal of breach of the peace convictions of 187 Negro students who demonstrated outside the South Carolina State House in Columbia. The court said the convictions infringed the Negroes' constitutional rights of free speech, free assembly and freedom to petition for redress of grievances.

Some observers saw the Columbia decision as opening the flood gates for numerous street demonstrations in various states in recent months.

Apparently out of patience over arrests of Negroes under local laws affecting transportation, the high court had this to say:

"We have settled beyond question that no state may require racial segregation of interstate or intrastate transportation facilities. The question is no longer open; it is foreclosed as a litigable issue."

NEW YORK (UPI)—There's a basis in fact for the name of the Educator Biscuit Company, according to Glen E. Speidel, president of the Lowell, Mass., firm.

The business was founded in 1885 by a Boston dentist named Johnson who wanted to improve the chewing habits of New England Children and created "the first "educational" cracker," Speidel said.

Asks Gold Standard Come Back

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United States must return to the gold standard to avert "financial disaster," the head of a large gold and uranium mining company said Thursday night.

Donald H. McLaughlin, chairman of Homestake Mining Co. of San Francisco, spoke at a dinner meeting here at which he received the Ambrose Monell Award from Columbia University's Henry Krumb School of Mines for distinguished achievement in mineral technology.

McLaughlin said gold's discipline must be accepted "or it will have to be repudiated entirely as the basic monetary commodity." Referring to the gold drain, he said a financial reckoning cannot be too long postponed "in spite of all the financial legerdemain that is now being employed to ease the strain."

Tied to the dollar, gold is being forced to accompany a depreciating currency in its decline in value, he said. A new gold standard would provide the world again with a trustworthy, stable money that would make it possible to check inflation and avoid the extreme hardship of deflation, McLaughlin said.

1,000 Civilians Are Killed in Laos Warfare

MUONG CHA, Laos (AP) — Refugee Meo tribesmen who fled from Communist attacks in the remote northeast corner of Laos have told of severe casualties—possibly 1,000 dead among civilians alone.

If the reports prove anywhere near accurate, the losses could be the highest in Laos' civil war.

A U.S. aid official helping care for the Meos reaching the Muong Cha Valley said it would be two or three weeks before a true count could be made.

Stories of the bloody attacks and ambushes came from 2,500 Meos who have reached this area 145 air miles north of Vientiane.

Eyewitnesses said Communist units struck simultaneously April 22 at two major Meo strongpoints, Pha Kha and Phou Nong, 10 miles apart and 100 miles north of Muong Cha near the border with North Viet Nam.

Heavy bombardment by Red mortars preceded the fighting, which lasted six days and resulted in the capture of both towns.

Award Suggestion Certificate Given to Lomas

RCAF Wing Commander L. J. (Lew) Lomas today received a Canadian Suggestion Award Certificate and a check in recognition of a suggestion he made in 1954.

He is an operations staff officer in the Directorate of Operations at North American Air Defense Command headquarters here. His mother, Mrs. Mary Lomas, lives at 104 Mimico Avenue, Toronto.

The presentation was made by Air Vice - Marshal Murray D. Lister, NORAD's chief of Operations.

The suggestion was a simple method of determining a pilot's position after emergency ejection — when he's within radar coverage — by using chaff as a location aid.

Chaff is narrow strips of aluminum foil. It was first used effectively by Allied bombers to jam enemy radars during World War II. When dropped from an aircraft in quantity it produces "snow" on a radar scope making it difficult for the operator to pick up and follow a target.

At that time, W-C Lomas was commanding officer of an RCAF radar station at Sydney, Nova Scotia. He was familiar with every known method of jamming radars, including the use of chaff.

He reasoned that a small amount of chaff in a pilot's parachute pack could be released automatically when he ejected. This would show up on radar scopes as a "burst" and be easily recognizable.

The radar operator would record the time, height and distance of the burst. Then by using the known rate of descent of a parachute and taking into consideration the wind, he could accurately estimate the pilot's position on reaching the ground.

Due to an oversight, the value and importance of the suggestion was not at first appreciated. It has now come to light that the idea has been adopted not only by the RCAF but by all NATO air forces.

W-C Lomas didn't know that a fellow Canadian who knows its value from first hand experience works in the same office. He is Squadron Leader R. J. (Bob) Burnett of St. James, Manitoba.

On Dec. 8, 1958, S-L Burnett was a member of the RCAF's No. 433 Porcupine Squadron stationed at North Bay, Ontario. He was the radar observer of a two - man CF - 100 fighter interceptor crew.

"We were on a night training exercise with three other aircraft. We were at 40,000 feet about 50 miles south of North Bay when it happened.

"We had intercepted the target aircraft and were number one on the run - in. As we completed our run, the target pilot ordered us to break left. My pilot banked left. The aircraft went out of control and into a power dive.

"When he couldn't regain control, my pilot ordered an ejection. His chute didn't deploy and he was killed. I landed safely several hundred yards from a farm house. I walked to the house and phoned the base.

"After I got back I learned that three radar stations — Edgar, Falconbridge and Foymount — had spotted the chaff from my 'chute when it opened at 20,000 feet.

"Although a search wasn't required to find me, it was comforting to know I had been spotted. The ground temperature that night was 40 degrees below zero."

"I never knew until today that the originator of the 'chaff' idea sits at the desk beside me."

LCM AGAINST FIRES

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Wisconsin Conservation Department is going to put a new weapon into action against forest fires on the Apostle Islands in Lake Superior. It is an LCM (landing craft, machine) once used by U.S. Army reservists in Michigan.

Neil LeMay, chief ranger for the department, noted there had been several serious fires on the islands which have been difficult to fight because of lack of docks. The landing craft, capable of carrying several tractors and plows and about 15 men, could get equipment directly to shore.

The Fugio Cent, dated 1787, was the first coin issued by the United States, according to the Chase Manhattan Bank Money Museum.

In addition to the American flag, the flags of England, France and Spain have flown over Michigan.

Marinas Selling Fuel for Boats Still Quite Rare

By JACK WOLISTON
United Press International

Marinas selling fuel are few and far between along the African coast. And what gasoline is available is expensive.

So when Peter Moorwood, noted deepsea sports fisherman Nairobi, Kenya, went shopping recently for a small flying bridge cruiser he had two basic desires: (1) a ruggedly built craft, and (2) diesel power for extended cruising range.

The boat he finally selected was a 23-foot fiberglass cruiser of the Citation series designed and built by the John Allmand Boat Corp., of Hialeah, Fla.

With this set-up, Moorwood has a boat with a cruising range of 1,400 miles, based on fuel capacity of 100 gallons and running at half-throttle. For example, the boat could easily cruise non-stop from New York to Nassau in the Bahamas.

Moorwood also achieved the economy he wanted — total cost for diesel fuel for the 1,400 miles would be about $25.

John Allmand whose company built the fly bridge cruiser, said that during shakedown tests the boat, despite a gross load of more than three tons plus six people, checked out with speeds of 30 miles per hour with a fuel consumption of less than three gallons per hour.

With a single diesel, cruising at 25 miles per hour range would be 2,000 miles, Allmand said.

The fiberglass cruiser has a complete galley and sleeps four —two large bow bunks with padded sides and two convertible seat-to-bunks amidships. The interior, including foldaway dining table, is finished in Marlite. Dual controls are atop the brig and inside the cockpit.

Moorwood plans to use the craft off Kenya, Tanganyika, Pemba and the island of Zanzibar.

The second section of the huge marina adjacent to New York's World's Fair will open tomorrow (Friday, May 1). It will consist of 135 floating fiberglass slips, 75 moorings and a floating fuel station.

The first section of 105 slips and 75 moorings went into operation April 22, the day the opened. The third section of 105 slips and additional moorings which will bring that marina up to its full 800-boat capacity are expected to be in operation by mid-June.

The marina's main administration building that will house a restaurant and ship's store, the Evinrude Communications Center and the Johnson Waterways USA Boat Travel Information Center, also will not be open until after June 1. These facilities, however, have been operating in temporary quarters since the fair opened.

The Marina, which can accommodate craft longer than 50 feet, already is virtually sold out for July and is nearly as heavily booked for August. said

Racial Disorders Are Reported in New Jersey

MADISON, N.J. (AP) — Fireworks were set off in six cars while their owners attended a human relations council meeting Thursday night to discuss the racial conflict over barber shop service in this college town of 16,000.

None of the cars were damaged seriously.

Police were investigating the incident, but they could not say whether the vandalism was connected with the barber shop dispute.

Firecrackers or cherry bombs were set off in the cars, which were parked in or near a lot at the Madison Methodist Church. The church adjoins Drew University, whose students and faculty have been spearheading a civil rights drive against five community barber shops that refuse to give haircuts to Negroes.

Earlier Thursday a bomb threat was telephoned to the university administration building. The builing was evacuated, but police found no bomb.

The car of Dr. Charles Robinson, a Negro veterinarian, had a smoldering fire in the front seat that was put out by the Fire Department. The front seat in the Rev. L. B. Whitman's car had a hole burned by a firecracker.

In four other cars, firecrackers were set on the dashboard and cracked the windshields when they went off.

NERVE CENTER

CLEAR LAKE, Tex. (UPI) — With the March move into the new home of the Manned Spacecraft Center, Clear Lake now is the nerve center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's moonshot program. More than 500 workers, including the 29 astronauts, moved into new offices here 22 miles southeast of central Houston.

Now 1,400 persons are housed at the center, but there are still 1,900 workers scattered about Houston and elsewhere. When complete next year, the $134 million center at Clear Lake will have 37 major buildings on 1,600 acres.

English Okayed For Church Rites

NEW YORK (AP) — Francis Cardinal Spellman announced today that the Vatican has approved use of the vernacular—English instead of Latin — in the liturgy of Roman Catholic churches in the United States.

Cardinal Spellman, archbishop of the New York diocese and presiding officer of the Conference of American Bishops, said the vernacular texts that were submitted by the bishops for use have been approved by the liturgical commission in Rome.

"As soon as the necessary liturgical books can be published," the cardinal said, "the Conference of American Bishops will announce the date when the use of the vernacular will be authorized."

A spokesman for the cardinal said the proposal to use the vernacular, submitted by U.S. bishops to the Holy See, is intended to give Roman Catholic congregations a better understanding of Church rites formerly conducted in Latin.

Mongolia Does Not Want Propaganda

MOSCOW (AP)—Mongolia has called on Communist China to call off its propaganda warfare against the Soviet Union inside Mongolia, the Soviet news agency Tass reported Friday night.

Tass said the rebuff was contained in a note by the Mongolian Foreign Ministry to the Chinese Embassy in Ulan Bator, Mongolia's capital.

The note called the attacks "a crude violation of the norms of interstate relations," Tass said.

Both the Soviet Union and China have attempted to woo Mongolia, a buffer state between the two Communist powers.

Wasson High School News

By CAROL JENSEN

Wasson's junior-senior prom will commence at 9 p.m. Saturday in the cafeteria. This year's theme is "Through the Looking Glass," and school publicity for the dance consists of posters like mirrors with gilded edges. The annual formal dance, sponsored by the junior class, will last until 12 midnight, after which those students interested may attend the after-prom activities in the Garden of the Gods. The price for this year's prom will be $1 for Wasson juniors and sophomores and $1.50 for out-of-school guests. Since the dance is given in honor of the graduating seniors, there will be no admission charge for them. Invitations were mailed to the seniors by the junior class, which is paying for the prom proceeds earned from the junior class play and other events.

The 10 senior girls and boys composing the 1964 Prom Court have been named as follows: Pat Bailey, Carol Bennett, Cheri Ingels, Paula Peak, Jan Wells, John Eastlack, Jim Bertrand, Roy Gault, Bill Mitchell and Mike Teague. In a sponsor group earlier, the seniors voted for five girls and five boys to represent them as the royal court. From these 10 seniors will come the prom queen and king. However, all of them will preside over the formal dance.

Wasson's A-squad cheerleaders for next year were chosen Monday during a triple assembly schedule. The present cheerleaders conducted the assemblies and led the student body in some school cheers. Cheri Ingels, head cheerleader, introduced the 10 prospective cheerleader candidates before they gave their own talk and cheer before the students. All the candidates tried out with the cheer [illegible]. The student body was to choose five girls on the ballots and turn them into the class teachers.

Dana Berry, sophomore; Gale Derrick, sophomore; Jan Eastlack, sophomore; Sue Givens, junior, and Susie Waymire, junior, are the new cheerleaders [illegible] the school. Ballots were counted Monday afternoon after the sophomore assembly.

Wasson's summer activities program will begin June 3 and continue until July 1. Such activities as baseball and gymnastic practice will be staged, and those students interested should see the gym instructor for further details about the schedule and registration cost.

Election of next year's officers was the order of business at the last Pep Club meeting of the year at 7 p.m. Thursday in the gym. Bars were also given to those girls who earned the correct number of points during the year. Points are recorded on a special club point card for attending athletic events in full Pep Club uniform.

Boy and girl students under 18 are invited to enter the golf tourney sponsored by the Jaycees on June 16 and 17. There is a $1.50 registration fee, and for those who pay before May 15, there is a free golf clinic.

Original student art, music, and drama was on display and sale May 13, 14, and 15 in the student center and downstairs study-hall room. This annual Fine Arts Fair gives creative students the opportunity to show their works and perhaps sell some. Those students viewing the objects who were interested in purchasing them were to see Don Green, art teacher, or check in the art room for details.

The "Wahian," Wasson's yearbook, will be distributed Friday to all students. However, seniors have the first privilege of obtaining the publication. Those with activity tickets are already assured of a yearbook, but those without the tickets will have to wait and obtain any extra copies.

Granite Chunk Taken Along by College

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — An armless housewife, once known to Georgia railroad men as the "child who waves without hands," gave birth to an 8-pound, 2-ounce girl at an Atlanta hospital Friday night.

Eighteen years ago, the former Grace Purcell, now Mrs. Harold E. Parker, waved to train engineers with the stubs for arms she has had from birth. She lived near Lovejoy, Ga., and a newspaper campaign raised money for artificial arms when she was six.

Now 20, she has discarded the artificial limbs.

State-Wide Naval Inspection to Begin in Springs

A state-wide inspection of Naval Reserve Training Centers and their reserve components will begin here Monday by top ranking officers of the Naval Reserve Training Command.

The inspection team will arrive from the Command Headquarters in Omaha, Nebraska. Capt. D. W. Davis, Deputy Commander for the Training Command, will head a team of four officers and three enlisted men. Throughout next week this group will inspect Reserve activities here, Pueblo, Denver, and Boulder.

On their arrival here early Monday, the team will meet with Commander S. R. Fallander, Reserve Training Center C. O.; Capt. J. D. Baird, prospective Training Center C. O. and the Reserve Surface Division commander, Norman Coleman.

Following a luncheon with City and Chamber of Commerce officials, the team will be guests of the Naval Forces Staff of NORAD. A tour and briefing of NORAD facilities is planned for the afternoon.

Monday evening the Reserve Training Center and the Reserve Surface Division 9-231 (M) will be inspected. According to CDR Fallander the Center and Division will be checked on its training procedures and personnel readiness. Also a full dress personnel inspection is scheduled.

Thursday evening the local Reserve Construction Battalion 9-30, commanded by Lieutenant Commander H. W. Elkins will be reviewed. Captain Hilton K. Davis, a civil engineering officer, and a member of this team will conduct the inspection.

The Naval Reserve Training Command is a nation-wide command that directs and supervises the training of Naval Reservists throughout the country. The command is tagged with the responsibility of insuring the readiness of trained manpower to augment the Fleet in time of mobilization.

GAZETTE-TELEGRAPH
Your Freedom Newspaper
Ever striving for the Pikes Peak Region to be an even better place to live

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

A Question of Morals

In our various contacts with young people of college age, there is one area of major significance where it seems to us that college people are being shortchanged by their instructors. This is the area of morality.

To approach the question of morality on a rational footing seems impossible to many a college professor. Morality is so tied in with usage and custom that to many morality is nothing more than a general standard of conduct believed in by a particular group.

Again, theology enters the field. Morality here becomes an arbitrary set of laws offered on the basis of divine revelation or, as a secondary consideration, a body of high purpose set forth by mystics or philosophers.

Finally, morality becomes a matter of government. The state determines what men may or may not rightfully do.

But in each of these cases, and their logical variants, there seems to be no single objective criterion of measurement. Custom and usage obviously provide us with no single standard. What is "right" at one time with one group of people may become "wrong" at a later time, or be viewed as "wrong" by their contemporaries.

Obviously, as we consider different groups of people, occupying their particular bit of terrain at certain periods of time, customs have varied widely including general standards as to what constitutes proper behavior.

A theological approach to the problem offers us no more certain a footing. There are at least eleven major religions extant today and more than 2,000 separate sects. The bulk of the major organized religions have come into existence as a result of divine revelation. A few have been formed by outstanding philosophers who made no claim to divine instruction.

But in certain particulars, the revelations or the instructions, whether of divine origin or otherwise, differ radically from each other. Thus, no assurance is found here, no single standard.

And going finally to the state as the arbiter of right and wrong leaves us even further in the dark. Governments notoriously are power-seeking groups. In the course of seeking power, politicians have not been entirely innocent of conduct which is at variance from the kind of conduct they demand of their subjects.

And in the course of maintaining power, politicians have been known to perform acts of violence on a wholesale basis. It appears that rules of conduct deriving from this source almost invariably suppose a double standard which clearly removes any possibility of a single objective standard.

As many college professors confront these confusing and conflicting backgrounds respecting morality, they take what seems to them the only honest course. That is, they deny the existence of an objective standard to be called morality and suggest that each student must find his own way through this morass of uncertainty as best he can.

The effect of this denial on the mind of the student becomes apparent with the passing of time. Having no anchoring point from which to determine the rightness or wrongness of his conduct, he leans increasingly toward the view that rightness is whatever he can contrive that will provide him with a plus factor. This is often called the "utilitarian" position. That is, "right conduct" becomes whatever it is that serves his purpose of the moment.

The problem with "utility" as a criterion is that there is a cause and effect relationship between events. Actions have consequences. An act which has immediate advantages may produce consequences that are disadvantageous or even disastrous in the long run.

So the best the drifting mind of the student can do is to be as farseeing as possible. Assuming he wishes "good" results for himself, he endeavors to project consequences of his acts as far into the future as possible. If apparent pitfalls can be removed, then he may deem a given act feasible and hence moral.

Within this framework, the student is even prone to go beyond an evaluation of his own actions. He now assumes that reactions which may descend upon him as a result of what he does, are now the deliberately caused injustices imposed upon him by others. He wants total latitude to do as he pleases. If the results he experiences are less than pleasing, it is not his fault; it is the fault of those who react against him.

Guilt

To be emotionally mature and spiritually free requires a sense of being without guilt. Guiltlessness depends on two things: a state of non-guilt and an understanding of reality sufficiently extensive so that guilt cannot be imposed by others.

Uses of the Senses

The idea of morality must rest upon an objective certainty, or be subject to shifting values with the passing of time and the variations in the human scene.

The question to be asked is this: Is morality a fact, or is it merely a system of values which may have merit, but which falls short of being a principle or a body of principles?

The idea of morality as being no more than a system of values began to be popular during the twenties.

The relativists within the physical sciences had dropped a bomb-shell. Things were not what they seemed. Newtonian physics seemed about to be repealed. Einstein had proved that man, as an observer, is not objective. He views reality in terms of his own position in time and space. Therefore, certainty about reality seemed to become a thing of the past. Now, no one could be sure of anything since it would all depend on where you were and how fast you were travelling when you made an observation.

What was probably intended at the outset as a check point by means of which larger accuracy in the physical sciences could be obtained, was suddenly grafted onto various disciplines within the humanities. Philosophers, always somewhat at sea, now cast off their remaining ties with reality. Who could be sure of anything?

A tree is standing in a forest. A storm blows it over. A man hears the tree fall and mentally interprets the sound he hears correctly. But suppose the tree is blown over and no man is within earshot? Did the noise of the fall actually ensue?

Of course, the matter depends in part on how noise is defined. If noise is defined as the reception of certain waves of sound by the human ear, then, obviously, if no ear is present there can be no sound.

But if noise is the disturbance of the air waves created by friction or other causes, then how does one know that the noise of the tree falling did occur if no one were present to hear it?

To be precisely accurate one can always assert that unless a man is present to hear the sound, one cannot PROVE that the sound took place. Well and good. But the relativists go beyond this. They DENY that the sound took place unless a man was present to hear it.

This particular form of denial, although presently on the wane in some colleges and universities, still has a following. It is a strange extension of the idea that man's capacity as an observer is limited, and subject to his own position in time and space.

For now, the relativist depends so thoroughly on man's limited powers of observation that lacking them, a full denial of all other salient points ensues. Instead of finding man's observations suspect and subject to checking, the relativist finds man's observations the only criteria which can pass muster, and virtually without checking.

With this kind of mental exercise in vogue, what can one expect in the field of morality? If it is easy to deny that a falling tree makes a noise unless someone is around to hear it, it is even easier to deny the existence of morality. Who can hear morality?

This somewhat shapeless line of reasoning leads to this: Nothing exists except those things a person's own senses reveal. And since morality derives from both experience, observation and reason, it is a simple matter for a person to avoid this tricky and difficult field. Just throw in the towel and confess that you have never seen a morality and leave your opponents gasping. If it can't be seen, it can't be.

Thus, a kind of twisted logic leads to a kind of disappearing universe. And by logic one can prove that there is no logic. No one ever saw a logic, either.

But fortunately, we are not bound to this purgatory of engulfing nothingness.

Experiments prove that solid objects falling through the air disturb air waves in such a way that friction ensues. Two solid objects colliding (i.e., tree and ground) create sizable disturbances in the air IN EVERY CASE, where air is present. In every case where an observer is present, this sound can be heard. Recording instruments can pick it up and recreate the audible event. Therefore, by experiment and logical deduction we can say that the lack of an auditor does not control the audibility of the event.

And we concur. If no one hears it, it was not heard. But whether anyone was present or not, the same opportunity for an audition occurs whenver two solid objects collide and air is present.

Reality exists all around us. At no time is man capable of sensing all that is real. But his failure to sense it does not remove reality, it merely removes certain reality from his experience. If he is willing to extend his experience, it is possible for him to grasp the existence of things which prior to the extension he did not experience.

We propose to examine morality in this light. We believe there is an objective criterion upon which morality rests. Further, we believe that this objective criterion can be discovered.

We do not think morality is the same thing as custom or usage. We do not think that morality rests upon some arbitrary dogma enunciated by a theologian, a philosopher or any other person, including ourselves. We do not think that morality is determined by government decree.

We believe that the existence of moral law can be determined in much the same way we have demonstrated that a falling tree makes noise.

The Local Scene

Nothing New

By RUFUS L. PORTER

"Hello, what's new?"
"Nothing."
There's nothing new around the town.
The town is growing fast and furious,
Some men get rich, and some penurious.
New buildings rise where old ones stood.
New folks arrive, both bad and good.
New industries are moving in;
And many new businesses begin.
New jobs of almost every kind
Are getting easier to find.
So many new faces on the street
A friend is often hard to meet.
New suburbs rise like mushrooms, too,
With each one trying to outdo
The others for quality, beauty and view.
The sun comes up, the sun goes down.
There's nothing new around the town.

One hundred thousand people strive
To earn their bread, to stay alive.
Daily children are being born,
And daily death strikes and people mourn.
We read of marriage and divorce
And take them all for granted, of course.
We read of crime and criminal acts
And worry not about the facts.
We read of good folks, brave and bold,
But all such stories leave us cold.
We read of losses, great and small,
But they don't bother us at all.
We sit on our rumps and watch TV,
For nothing means so much, you see,
Unless it happens to you and me.
There's nothing new around the town.

Well, it's about time to limber up the fishing rod. Thar's plenty of fish in them thar hills — if you know where to go. Working at a tourist attraction six days a week all summer and fall, I don't get much time for fishing the way I did when in the gold camp. But tourists are like fish — you got to catch 'em while they're biting.

Can't get into where I like to fish anyhow until the middle of June or later. I like to fish in the high country where the natives are. Trout, that is.

They sort of took a lot of the fun out of it when they made fishing legal the year around anyhow. It was more fun if you snuck out and poached a little now and then.

And opening day was one of the most exciting events imaginable. All the fishermen would be in a high fever waiting all winter for the fishing season to open. And no gold rush ever equaled the wild stampede to the hills on opening day.

We live near the highway, and a few years ago, before year-round fishing became legal, my wife woke me in the middle of the night and said, "There must be a bomb scare in town, just listen to all the cars going up the pass." I got up and looked out at the road and the cars were practically bumper to bumper. Then it dawned on me — this was OPENING DAY.

We were leaving Colorado Springs one opening day morning about 15 years ago, and up Ute Pass a rock slide had come down right in front of a brand-new Buick. Four men piled out of the car and we stopped to see if we could help. The driver had hit a big boulder and rolled it under the axle where it had done great damage to the engine. We exclaimed sympathetically over the wreckage of the new car.

"The heck with the car," said the owner, "we wanted to go fishin', now there'll be a thousand guys in there ahead of us."

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

Question No. 500: "Why are co-operatives, where the government gives them no tax advantage, short lived?"

Answer: They are short lived because it is a form of socialism. The man who puts in $100 has as much to say in his vote as the man who puts in $1000. And they invariably vote to benefit those who only put in $100 rather than vote to respect the rights of those who sacrificed and put in $1000.

The same thing seems to be the case in government where each individual has the same vote. The improvident invariably outvote the provident and they vote to take away from the accumulation of tools. They even hurt the improvident because they have to work with less or poorer tools and thus they produce less and earn less and less.

It might be argued that the Associated Press is a co-operative. They are not a pure co-operative, however, because bonds are issued and they are usually held by the larger newspapers and they control the officers and thus they do not permit the majority of small newspapers to vote to give them services at less than cost. Giving those people who produce little the same vote as those who produce more, invariably leads pure democracies to be short lived and as Madison said, violent in their death.

We are going through that very rapidly. The government is growing rapidly and taking from the man with initiative and ability his right to be useful to himself and to his fellow man.

Questions are limited to general human relations questions that will improve the well-being of all mankind on this earth.

Probe Costs Of Grain 'Giveaways'

ROBERT ALLEN

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators are taking a close hard look at the sale of surplus farm commodities to Iron Curtain and other countries.

There is increasing suspicion that in addition to selling large quantities of grain and other commodities on what amounts to a give-away basis, the U.S. also is being stuck for unwarranted transportation charges.

Reason for this growing backstage belief is a report by Comptroller General Joseph Campbell disclosing that the Commodity Credit Corporation paid "excessive ocean transportation costs" on agricultural sales to Communist Yugoslavia and "neutralist" United Arab Republic.

In both instances, the wheat and other foodstuffs were, in effect, given away.

These so-called sales were made under Title I of Public Law 480. Under this statute, payment was in Yugoslav and U.A.R. currency. Further, this local money remained in the two countries, some of it to be used for construction and other projects. The remainder was earmarked to the credit of the U.S. in the form of "counterpart funds."

The U.S. has more than $105 million in such "counterpart funds" in Yugoslavia, and upwards of $100 million in the U.A.R.

In the specific cases cited by the comptroller general, the Commodity Credit Corporation footed $146,000 in improper transportation costs on giveaway sales to Egypt and $132,000 to Yugoslavia — for an overall total of $278,000.

While these amounts are relatively small, the congressional investigators strongly suspect they are indicative of a widespread practice of bureaucratic bumbling or possibly worse that may run into millions, as Title I P.L. 480 sales run into the hundreds of millions.

That's why the probers want to know a lot more about "excessive ocean transportation costs" and what's being done about them — if anything.

MAKE 'EM PAY IT BACK

Comptroller General Campbell is very explicit about what should be done.

Bluntly, he asserts these improper charges should be recovered — by direct crackdown if necessary. Following is Campbell's stern finding:

"We are recommending that the Secretary of Agriculture take appropriate action to effect the recovery from the United Arab Republic and Yugoslavia of dollars to which the United States government is entitled because of excessive transportation costs financed by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"To the extent required to liquidate the claims against these countries, consideration should be given to withholding amounts due the United States government from dollars otherwise due these countries. Appropriate implementation of this recommendation takes on added significance in view of the current international balance-of-payments deficit of the United States."

That puts it squarely up to the Agriculture Department and the State Department. What they will do remains to be seen. The odds are against the State Department's doing much.

It's not given to either speed or forcefulness in such matters.

SECRET SERVICE SECRET

James Rowley, highly regarded veteran head of the Secret Service, at a private meeting of the House Appropriations Committee, made one observation about guarding a President that was extremely revealing.

The comment, spontaneous and from Rowley's heart, told a great deal about the problems faced by the Secret Service — and also about the late President Kennedy.

The committee was considering the Secret Service budget and Rowley was closely questioned on a wide range of matters. Representative Silvio Conte, R-Mass., was particularly searching. Patiently and thoughtfully, Rowley answered all questions until one committeeman bluntly asked:

"Isn't it true that the late President traveled around Washington at night sometimes without a Secret Service guard?"

"Yes," snapped Rowley. "But how in heck could you protect a President who didn't want to be protected? There were a number of times when he slipped away from us at night. He did not want us, and there wasn't a thing in the world we could do about it."

The committee, in voting a $150 million budget for the FBI and expanding its authority to include "protection of the person of the President of the U.S.," also empowered it to buy "one armored vehicle."

There was no explanation for this mysterious provision. It is not known whether the armored vehicle is to be used in protecting the President or visiting VIPs.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover told the Appropriations Committee that his agency has made more than 2,250 investigative reports containing more than 10,800 pages ... to the commission on President Kennedy's assassination."

Also that more than 790 "items of physical evidence were received in the FBI laboratory for technical examination, and our exhibit experts have constructed and delivered to the commission a detailed scale model of the assassination area including appropriate buildings, landmarks, and the like, with accompanying volume of visual aids to assist the commission in handling its responsibilities."

In response to questions, Hoover estimated Russia is spending $1.5 billion annually on "intelligence operations."

"A former officer of the KGB (Soviet Committee of State Security) estimated that the foreign intelligence director of the KGB had several thousand employes, including legal and illegal agents and trainees. He said that the head of the foreign intelligence directorate had indicated that Soviet intelligence spent about $1.5 billion a year.

"The FBI is utilizing every resource at its command to meet the threat posed by this army of spies. Because of our aggressive investigative activity, the Soviet intelligence services consider the U.S. as the most difficult country in which to carry on clandestine espionage operations."

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

To the Editor:

Minnesota, home state of Senator Humphrey, has a population of 3,413,864 out of which .0006 per cent or 22,263, are Negroes. He is the head of the so-called Civil Rights Bill.

Massachusetts, another so-called strong civil rights state, has a population of 5,148,578 out of which .019 per cent, or 111,842, are Negroes.

Mississippi, whose leaders are against the so-called Civil Rights Bill, has a population of 2,178,141 out of which 43 per cent, or 915,743, are Negroes. Georgia, another anti-civil rights state has a population of 3,943,116 out of which 28 per cent, or 1,122,596 are Negroes. These figures are 1960 U.S. census figures.

The taking over of Motorola by the Illinois F.E.P.C. on the grounds that aptitude tests are unfair to minorities is only a sample of things to come if the federal Civil Rights Bill passes. It means the end of the labor unions and their "hiring" halls will be taken over, that is for sure. Ask the railroad unions.

Who is going into any new business if his hiring and firing help is taken away from him? Aptitude tests have been standard and customary procedure for most companies needing skilled help. They get the best that way. When Civil Rights passes, if it does, you will take what they give you and like it.

Of course, you may operate at a loss for a while and finally go under. But who cares? There is still the Peace Corps. No age limit on that, either.

MISLEADING

To the Editor:

Mr. Russell Kirk, in his May 12 column titled, "Compulsory Congregation," states that the Civil Rights Bill being debated presently in the Senate "authorizes school commissioners to remedy racial imbalance." I feel as Mr. Kirk does that the project of bussing children back and forth from one school district to another in order to achieve this "balance" is "nonsensical." The bill, however, not only does NOT authorize the school commissioners to "remedy racial imbalance" but in fact, makes it very clear that the desegregation which it calls for "shall not mean the assignment of students to public schools in order to overcome racial imbalance." (Please see Title IV, Sec. 401 (b) and Title IV, Sec. 407.)

I think Mr. Kirk misleads us in this instance and should be corrected.

KNOWLEDGE

To the Editor:

Wish to thank you for publishing my letter.

My continued interest in subject matter is due to my belief that improved understanding of intellectual circumstance involved could be of vital value within major possibilities of improvement in human relations.

I believe that common concept regarding the word knowledge would hold that it is intellectual circumstance apart from and superior to belief. I would suggest that if such circumstance does exist, it would in the nature of things have to be either direct and utterly irrevocable reflection of reality (truth) or else some thought (true or false) existing in some intellectual no man's land somewhere between belief and truth; an intellectual monstrosity.

One easily defines belief as concept accepted to be truth, or truth as direct reflection of reality or reality as circumstance within boundaries of time and space, yet I submit that asking hundreds of people for a clear definition of knowledge has met with zero success, for the reason in my firm conviction that no such intellectual circumstance exists or could exist due to above indicated essential (no man's land) intellectual area that would of necessity have to house such intellectual goodie.

Obviously, if a man carries certain beliefs that represent direct reflection of reality, superimposition of knowledge, whatever it may be, could be of no possible value in carrying out whatever involved objective.

Wish to thank you for introducing in your editorial the concept or superstition of a flat earth carried by men along with countless other false concepts for thousands if not limitless millions of years, and I believe that concept concerning abovementioned intellectual goodie is simply another superstition not yet exposed to the light of day.

While most superstitions involve some physical circumstance, the golden calf was real enough, the spirit in the southeast corner of the house at least had a room to exist in, but abovementioned goodie is strictly abstract devoid of any physical circumstance that might tend to provide rational exposure; moreover, I believe that desire to believe in existence of indicated goodie is fundamental - universal - timeless, and as adamant as any desire within the capacity of a human being, whether he is a cowhand, financier, a humanitarianistically motivated politician, or perchance even ye editor.

In short, I believe that circumstance of intellectual competence in any manner apart from and-or superior to belief within area and-or direction of recognition of truth is simply naturally and everlastingly nonexistent. If so, little wonder that no one is capable of supplying a simple concise definition.

Obviously, recognition of my belief in subject of this letter could in no way create injustice or hurt any imaginable desirable activity, unless the [illegible] is a [illegible]. On the other hand, misuse of power based on belief that the fellow king or whatever is equipped with reservoirs of knowledge with which to provide guidelines to the common man along with power to ensure that such whims are carried out would be drastically reduced if not eliminated. Many areas of human relationships would, I believe, enjoy similar value gain.

Incidentally, among the many above-mentioned contacts was a visit with a famous religious leader, a man of, I believe, very high moral and intellectual order. Although a private meeting, his reaction to above-mentioned concept was immediate and that refusal to discuss subject matter. I do not blame him as his life and happiness is his own responsibility, and though recognizing truth may prefer to avoid it because he may correctly believe general recognition to be quite beyond normal desire and — or ability.

Nevertheless the hour is late, we are losing, perhaps it would be desirable to make an effort to recognize that false concepts or superstitions of great consequence may still reside within us.

Man is not God.

Thank you again for your courtesy and interest.

TREND

To the Editor:

"We, the people . . ."

"They, the government . . ."

Thusly might be written the history of the United States.

Never before have We, the people been more suppressed. Never before have They, the government exercised such regulation and control over so much of the private and business lives of Americans. And today the talk is all of what He, the Leader demands; who He, the leader shall be.

We, the people did establish this government. This government did then extend its bounds, trespassing upon those rights and powers reserved to the people and to the states. Finally, we now see the Executive taking control of We, the people, control of the other branches of the government, as He, The Leader trends towards totalitarian control.

"We" failed to be self-responsible. "They" began taking care of us and "He" will take care of us, and how.

PRAYERS IN SCHOOL

To the Editor:

The House Judiciary Committee is now holding hearings on a matter of urgent concern to every American, one which strikes at the very foundation of our heritage — our religious freedom.

Bills have been introduced to change the Constitution to permit the reading of prayers and the Bible (presumably the Protestant Bible) in our public schools. No matter what religious persuasion any family or individual may have, such a change would bring into the public schools religious instruction which our children would have to attend, whether it agrees with our own and our pastor's individual views or not. The very choice of what is to be read, what prayer is to be used, is an invasion by a secular authority into our religious liberties, and it seems to me no school authority should have the responsibility of choosing what religious ideas our children should or should not hear.

Whatever stand any family or individual has on this matter, I urge him to write both his state and federal representatives (for constitutional amendments must come before each state legislature) his opinion. For if we allow this challenge to our religious freedom to go without expressing ourselves fully, we may lose the very basis of our American way.

MUSICAL NOTE

To the Editor:

Maytime is here and "Ringo is bust-ing out all over." In fact, all the Beatles (George, John and Paul) also are "bustin'" out all over.

How come? A Glasgow, Scotland, firm that does those busts of Beethoven is now offering busts of each one of the toupee-lookin' four.

…G – BOYS DO MUCH OF WORK

Former Local Boy Now at Texas Ranch

Webb Nichols, a former Colorado Springs boy, now making his home at Cal Farley's Boys Ranch near Amarillo, will be sharing in the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Ranch next Sunday.

A highlight of the anniversary celebration will be combined commencement exercises for 32 seniors and 47 eighth-graders, the largest number of graduates in the Ranch's history.

Famed Juvenile Judge Philip B. Gilliam of Denver, Colorado, will be commencement speaker.

Boys Ranch began in 1939 when Cal Farley, former world champion wrestler and successful Amarillo businessman, took six homeless boys and gave them a home in the abandoned courthouse of Old Tascosa, Texas.

"There are so many fine youngsters in our nation today who need Boys Ranch so badly, and we would have twice our present number if we had room for them," Farley said. "I am confident, however, that if we continue to receive the kind of help that so many fine people have given us during the past 25 years, we will be able to help even more boys."

Barry Launches Campaign on Television

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater pressed his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination in an unusual national television appearance Wednesday night in which he summed up his views both of foreign and domestic policies.

Goldwater, who explained that he wanted to talk to the people "past the news stories, past the headlines and past the crowds," declared that the United States should take the lead in applying economic and political pressures "to change the Communist plan."

"In fact I think we ought to use every peaceful means available for calling freedom's tune," Goldwater said in the taped 30-minute show on CBS television.

It was sponsored by the Goldwater for President Committee and included films of the senator's life and political career. Goldwater staff members estimated the cost of the broadcast at $75,000.

Among the views Goldwater set out were these:

The United States, he said, "can and should end the fighting in Viet Nam by taking strong, affirmative action."

American allies, he said, are shying away from U.S. leadership because this nation has negotiated with Communist nations "as though we trusted them more than we do our friends."

Victory in the cold war, Goldwater declared, would "set the stage for a world in which all nations can disarm in mutual trust." Until then, he added, the United States must remain strong.

As for civil rights, Goldwater said new laws alone aren't "going to solve anything." He said there must be time for people "to think and feel their way along. An atmosphere of violence just tends to harden our hearts, not open them up."

To escape higher federal debt and "controls, controls and more controls," Goldwater said he feels greater reliance should be placed on free enterprise.

The government, he said, has a responsibility to "seek the sort of climate in which as many people as possible can help themselves. In short, it ought to let this amazing enterprise system of ours go forward in the way it has proven it can—go forward to create more and better jobs."

Five Children Burn To Death in Pueblo

PUEBLO (AP) — Five young children were burned to death Saturday when fire destroyed their home.

Officials said their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Manzanaras, were attending a party in suburban Avondale at the time. The home was located three miles east of Pueblo.

The dead were listed by relatives as Caroyn, 9, Josie, 7, Leo, Jr., 5, Kenney, 4, and Billy, 3.

A neighbor, Jan Spinuzzi, said he saw flames leaping from the roof of the home at about 3 a.m. and called firemen. The five-room structure was engulfed in the blaze when firemen arrived.

Bodies of four children were found in bed in one room. The other child was found on the floor of another room.

Investigators said the cause of the fire had not been determined.

Tribe Trips Las Animas In Semi-Final Round

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Coach Eldon Helm's Indians will attempt to pick up their fifth State Class-AA baseball championship when the Cheyenne Mountain aggregation meets Delta next Saturday afternoon at the Western Slope team's home field.

The Tribe qualified for the state finals when they posted a 4-2 triumph over Las Animas Saturday afternoon in Colorado Springs' Memorial Park. Delta nipped Thornton, 7-6, in 10 innings to earn the other state berth.

This will be the last chance for the Indians to clinch the Class-AA championship as the Cheyenne school is slated to advance to the higher state division, Triple - A, next fall. And this will be Helm's last year in coaching. Helm is scheduled to take over the duties of principal of Cheyenne Mountain and will end his nine year coaching career at that school.

During the nine years at Cheyenne, Helm's baseball teams have won seven Pikes Peak League titles and four state championships. Should the Indians defeat Delta, it would present Helm with his fifth state crown and 118th victory.

For the most part, the Cheyenne team wrapped up its seventh PPL championship behind strong pitching and hitting from the regulars.

Lefty Ted Garcia held down the pitching chores during the PPL campaign and the junior hurler maintained control which enabled the Indians to keep their winning streak intact. When the Tribe defeated Air Academy High two weeks ago for the PPL title, Garcia contributed to Cheyenne's 57 consecutive league victories.

But in Saturday's State Class-AA semi - finals playoff game against Las Animas, Garcia gave Helm and the Cheyenne backers cause for concern.

Garcia had difficulties finding the plate and the Cheyenne portside chucker found himself in a tight jam in the final inning before the Indians pulled out the victory to qualify for the state championship this Saturday.

The Indians' ace pitcher gave up six walks, which is considerably higher than his usual 2.1 walks - per - game, and was racked for six hits by the Las Animas aggregation. Garcia was off form in the strikeout department as he only registered four against the Trojans.

Meanwhile, the Cheyenne bombers went to work on Las Animas chucker, Jerry Garcia, for five well - placed hits to record the crucial victory. The Indians' first baseman, Jeff Leigh, collected one hit and drove in two runs to highlight Cheyenne's efforts at the plate.

Ted Garcia usually controls things from the mound, but Saturday his fielders were kept busy chasing balls and assisted in 13 outs, which was an especially difficult chore considering the strong cross - wind at Memorial Park.

After the Cheyenne pitcher walked the first batter it looked as though Garcia was in for a long afternoon. The Trojans jumped on Garcia in the opening frame for their initial tally when Lee Herron doubled with two out to score the leadoff batter, Jim Pryor.

Garcia gave up two additional hits the next five innings but managed to stifle any further scoring threat. However, Garcia loaded the bases in the seventh stanza after the Cheyenne infield completed a brilliant double play.

With only one out standing between him and the victory, Garcia once again ran into control problems. He walked Jerry Garcia. Bob Gibson singled and Herron followed suit to fill the bases. John Holt scored the Trojans' second run with a clean single to score Jerry Garcia.

The next Las Animas batter hit to shortstop Jeff Thatcher to end the inning and the ball game.

"Ted was trying to throw too hard and couldn't keep his delivery consistent. This caused him to be off balance and he couldn't control the ball," Helm said after the game.

"Ted has developed effective curve, but he couldn't use it to his best advantage. He was pitching too high to the batters and that's why Herron (Lee) whacked that ball in the first inning," Helm further stated.

"Overall, we played well. But we should have gotten more hits off Garcia (Jerry). There are better pitchers in the Pikes Peak League than what we faced today," Helm concluded.

For the Trojans, Herron who came into Saturday's game hitting .357, was the most successful hitter as the pitcher - outfielder belted a single and double and one RBI for four times at bat. The top five hitters in the Las Animas lineup were responsible for the Trojans' six hits.

Cheyenne scattered its hits among the lineup with the five hits going to Bill Massarand, Gary Graham, Jack O'Brien, Joel Folk, Garcia and Leigh.

The Indians struck in the second and third frames to record two tallies in each inning. Leigh singled in the second stanza to score Folk and Garcia.

Berven Wins Mile Title In State Cinder Meet

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

BOULDER — Wasson's Jeff Berven electrified a crowd of 3,000 with a sensational final quarter Saturday to win the state AAA mile championship in one of the highlights of a day jammed with brilliant performances by Colorado's high school track and field stars.

Berven's pulsating finish brought Colorado Springs its first individual AAA title in two years but the Wasson whiz missed on his try at snapping the mile standard of 4:25.2 which is the oldest record on the books in this state. Still, the 4:28.1 clocking turned in by the Thunderbird power-plant was a career best and it was the best performance by a prep miler in Colorado in several years.

While Berven provided the headline news for Springs area fans, East Denver's magnificent galaxy of stars turned the team battle into a complete rout. The powerful Angels amassed 62 points to outdistance the runners-up schools, Wheat Ridge and Fort Collins, by 45½ points. The [illegible] performance by the East squad undoubtedly stamped it as the greatest high school track team in Colorado history.

Denver Manual's defending champions staggered home fourth Saturday with 15 points while George Washington and Boulder tied for fifth with 12 each. Wasson used Berven's five-point contribution to move into a tie for ninth with Lakewood and Lee Ranum. Palmer scored four points and [illegible] in a four-way deadlock for 12th.

Even though the team struggle was over almost before the meet got out of the starting blocks, spectators were treated to multiple thrills by the outstanding field of individuals. Four of the imposing list of records which faced the competitors were smashed and two more tied as the athletes responded to the almost perfect weather conditions which greeted them here.

Perhaps the day's most astounding accomplishment was turned in by Fort Collins' Gene Gall in the 440 yard dash. Gall, whose toothpick frame and lack of press notices could not have been more deceptive, faced an outstanding field in the one-lap race, including defending champion Rich Fowler of Arvada. The Fort Collins lad, running in the outside lane with an almost effortless motion, whipped across the finish line in 47.8 to rip apart Chris Babbs' existing record by nearly a full second.

Earlier in the afternoon, Mike Sandberg of Wheat Ridge had climaxed an exciting duel in the shot put by writing his name on the record book with a heave of 60-0¾. Sandberg had a narrow lead at a distance some three feet less than his winning heave when Lakewood's Steve Elliott applied the pressure by flipping the 12-pounder 59-11¾ on his last try. The Wheat Ridge ace then responded by firing his final try across the chalk line that marked the 60 foot barrier.

Boulder's Warren Gillette became the third record holder in the broad jump in as many years when he flew 23-5¾ on his first attempt in the finals. And the East Denver mile relay team climaxed the meet by clipping one-tenth of a second from the old standard in that event.

In addition, two of the state's most respected records were tied, both by East Denver stars. Dave Stevens flashed to a 14.2 in the high hurdles, equaling the mark set by former Palmer great Jim Miller. Stevens clipped the second to last hurdle as he sailed across or he quite possibly would have eclipsed the Miller standard which was considered almost unapproachable when it was set in 1961.

And the Angels' J. R. Craig, who led that school to the state basketball championship earlier this year, soared over 6-7¾ to tie a mark set just last year by Manual's John Hartfield.

Overall, East Denver won an astounding seven first places in the 14 event meet. Stevens picked up a double when he clipped off the low hurdles in 19.6 and the Angels' Art Levy sizzled to a dual triumph in the dashes, churning the 100 in 9.9 and the 220 in 21.8. What made matters even worse for the teams who were being trampled underfoot by the Angels was the information that Levy is just a sophomore.

Palmer came extremely close to having a winner in the pole vault where Bob McCoy joined Pueblo Central's Gary Gehlhoff and Chuck Rogers of Denver Washington in topping over the 13-6 mark. However, on the basis of fewest misses, Rogers was awarded first place and Gehlhoff second.

The Terrors' other point was gathered by Bobby Joe Williams in the high hurdles. Williams, who last week won the district championship in the event, was not at top form Saturday and could not recover from a bad start even though he made a strong late bid among the classy field.

It was Berven who provided the crowd with one of its top thrills, however. The Wasson great, who was third a year ago, has been battling a throat ailment for several days and had been well below his best form in the district meet last Saturday. His physical condition was still a source of concern to his coaches when the gun sounded for the start of the grueling battle at Boulder.

Well back in the field for the first couple of laps, Berven began to close ground on the leaders on the third circle. Still, as the runners headed into the final curve he was trailing in fifth place and it appeared as though the sought-after state crown was to go unrewarded for the second straight spring.

Then suddenly, with a great burst of power, the Wasson star thundered out of the curve and swept past the leaders to win going away. He was clocked unofficially in 62.3 for that final quarter.

Afterwards, Berven's explanation to congratulations was brief and to the point. "I guess I just got mad seeing those people in front of me," he said. "So I decided I'd better pass them."

Pendant Playoffs

The confusion that has clouded the playoff situation for regional schools battling for a spot in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Little World Series is hardly new to anyone who has spent more than a dozen months in the Centennial State. It's been nearly as regular as the Fourth of July, but remains interesting if nothing more than adding suspense to the end of the season.

This year, of course, the only logical candidates for the baseball playoffs were left hanging like overripe apples because no definite date and site had been arranged. This was somewhat excusable in that the fields to be used depended on the teams involved and that couldn't be determined until near the end of the schedule.

Although Colorado State College's Pete Butler has been made the goat of the confusion this year, actually the fault lies more with the arrangement indecision of the NCAA more than anything else.

The dates of the first round playoffs were set by the NCAA for the weekend of May 22 at the group's winter meeting, but the details were left to the regional representative, which in the case of District 7 (the Rocky Mountain area) was George Petrol, the New Mexico University baseball coach.

Being consistent with most NCAA appointees, Petrol passed the buck by leaving it up to the schools involved instead of using any authority given him and settling the whole affair himself. With his own Lobos out of the running, the New Mexico coach undoubtedly could care less.

Contradicting stories came from opponents for the playoffs with the area's obvious independent choice, the Air Force Academy, claiming that Butler was unavailable for arrangements. The CSC coach, who reportedly was miffed at having to be in a first round elimination series instead of getting a free ride to the second round as with the case of the Western Athletic Conference champion, could not be reached at the school and C-State officials merely said "he's out of town."

On Tuesday of this week, however, Butler was quite available when he brought his Bears to Colorado Springs for a league game with Colorado College and a victory that cinched at least a tie for the RMC title and a playoff berth since second place CC was ineligible because of using freshmen.

"I don't know what they're talking about," Butler remarked to the "out of town" statement. "I've been teaching class every day."

And finally on Wednesday the two schools found connections between here and Greeley and the schedule for playoffs was worked out. CSC had to change its schedule which had final games slated for May 23, and because the Greeley diamond is to be used for the state high school class AAA tournament that day, the first of the three-game series was set for the Air Force field. NCAA rules now prohibit play on Sunday, except in the case of rainouts and when all are agreeable, so the second game is set for Monday and the third (if needed) on Tuesday at a site to be determined by the flip of a coin.

The bickering that has already been magnified in newsprint is bound to make this a lively few games, however.

Butler may have some point on his informal protest of the way the playoff has been set up ... at least in theory. He contends that the league champion from the Rocky Mountain Conference should no more be obligated to play the independent representative (AFA) than the champ of the Western Conference.

The schedule, though, was made as much for convenience as practicability as the WAC necessitated a playoff between Northern and Southern division winners within its bulky borders and this amounts to a series between two leagues. And also, it must have been considered that Butler's Bears have always had greased skids to the RMC title (before CC threw them a slight scare this spring) and that CSC's crown could hardly have the same jewels as that of one of the major conferences around the country.

As an independent, the Air Force has little choice but to bend to the dictates of the NCAA and work their way through the playoffs anyway seen fit. It would hardly be logical for the AFA to play the eventual WAC titlist after that league's North-South series, and then have Colorado [illegible] while two of the three area contenders are knocked out of the running.

There is still no explanation as to why Colorado State scheduled its final games with Adams State College at Alamosa on the same day the playoffs were to begin, for the NCAA had set that date before the RMC had completed its slate. Surely Butler was not figuring any other team for the title after winning 21 consecutive Rocky Mountain championships!

With the introduction this year of an informal "newspaper" standings for the area independents, the Air Force was assured that spot in the playoffs several weeks ago. The Falcons have soundly licked all other candidates and have an overall margin of .865 compared to Denver University's next best at 17-16 through games in the middle of this week.

Lt. Col. Connie Sparks, who took over this season for departed Wendy Lawrence as the AFA varsity coach, has done a great job of handling an extremely small pitching staff that included two sophomores in the four-man bullpen, and in every way has brought the Falcons along to be undoubtedly the strongest team in the short history of the school.

Still the past attitude of the Academy may have kept the eliminations in doubt. As recently as last spring the Cadets were also eligible to enter the playoffs but declined and CSC was left without an opening round opponent.

Before that, there was hardly any opposition for the Bears to get all the way to the "World Series" as powers like Arizona and Arizona State were in a different district and before the Air Force came on the scene there were few to even mildly challenge — especially with Colorado U. competing in the Big Eight.

Last year the Air Force again had the best record of the independents, although only 15-11, but turned down the "feeler" bid from Petrol with the excuse that the Omaha Series was in conflict with graduation and military obligations.

Now it will be interesting to see if the "conflicts" can be dodged should the Falcons perform a small miracle and get past both Colorado State and the WAC winner for the trip to the finals. That .865 winning percentage could have something to do with changing policies.

It undoubtedly will take a Pentagon type decision to rend the trip to Omaha should the Falcons qualify for the national championships at the same time as graduation.

It's interesting to note that Butler pointed out his Bears were actually the only team in the Rocky Mountain Conference eligible for these playoffs, in the major college division. All other teams, he says, have either freshmen or transfers who are illegal for the NCAA playing on their teams.

Anyway, the RMC allows frosh to play with schools with small enrollments like CC. And the conference rules for transfers differs slightly from the NCAA. Colorado College actually uses freshmen in all sports except ice hockey, where the school competes on a major school basis.

There is a rumor that the Air Force might be interested in, however, that CSC's sheets are not as clean as they claim. Although Papa Bear has been pointing the finger at others, the eligibility of some at the Greeley school (especially Ron Bettinger) has been questioned.

Helm, Funk Named All-Star Coaches

Eldon Helm, coach of Cheyenne Mountain's perennial Pikes Peak League champions, and Gib Funk, who has guided Wasson's Thunderbirds to outstanding records every season, have been selected to serve as head coaches for the first annual All-Star baseball game which will be played at Memorial Park Fri., June 5.

The choices were made this week by a committee of persons representing the sports staffs of the city's radio, television, and newspaper media. In addition, coaches from area high schools are currently working on player selections for the two teams which will participate in the game. Announcement of the players will be made next Sunday.

In accordance with rules established by the steering committee for the game, both head coaches have chosen assistants to aid them during the practices and the actual contest. Helm will be assisted by Russ Lyon, who guided the Air Academy High to a second place finish in the Pikes Peak League. Funk will be assisted by Jerry Hughes of Palmer.

Helm and Lyon will guide the Metropolitan All-Stars, a team composed of players from Academy High, Cheyenne Mountain, Harrison, Manitou Springs, and Widefield. Funk and Hughes will coach the City Stars from Palmer, St. Mary's, and Wasson.

The game was devised this season as a benefit contest to help provide funds for the summer baseball program in the city. Plans have already been worked out to join the City and American Legion in a program which will give Colorado Springs a vastly improved system of baseball competition for interested youths.

Tickets for the game have been on sale since early in the month. Adult tickets are available for $1.00 at Blick's Sporting Goods Store, and the Palmer and Wasson business offices. Student tickets may be obtained at any of the participating high schools for 50 cents.

The field officials and the majority of the equipment for the game is being donated so that the funds may all be directed to giving a badly-needed booster shot to Colorado Springs' summer program.

AT THE WIRE—This is how the six horse field looked Saturday as it came to the finish line in the 88th running of the Preakness. Northern Dancer was first, adding the second of the triple crown after his Kentucky Derby victory. The others finished: The Scoundrel, second; Hill Rise, third; Quadrangle, fourth; Roman Brother, fifth, and Big Pete, sixth. (AP Wirephoto)

Dancer Captures Preakness For Triple's Second Jewel

By ORLO ROBERTSON

Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Kentucky Derby winner Northern Dancer made it stick with emphasis Saturday when he pulled away in the last quarter mile for an easy victory in the 88th running of the $176,700 Preakness at Pimlico.

Hill Rise, odds-on choice in the field of six 3-year-olds, was not only unable to match Northern Dancer's great run through the stretch but also bowed to The Scoundrel, and ended in third place.

Bill Hartack, outfoxing Bill Shoemaker on Hill Rise at every point, sent the Canadian-owned Dancer over the 1 3-16 miles in 1:56 4-5. The time over a fast track compared with the record of 1:54 3-5, set by Nashua in 1955.

Northern Dancer, made the 2-to-1 second choice by the crowd of 35,975 despite his victory in the Derby two weeks ago, made his challenge one-half mile from home after running close to the early pace set by Quadrangle.

As he made his move, Hill Rise also challenged for the lead, but the son of Nearctic from E. P. Taylor's Windfield Farms of Toronto never gave an inch.

With three-eighths of a mile to go, the dazzling Dancer stuck his nose in front. One-eighth of a mile further he had opened up daylight.

And from there on home it was strictly a battle for second, as Hartack went on to the wire without using the whip.

Then came Quadrangle, Roman Brother and Big Pete.

Northern Dancer, who also was the second choice in the Derby, returned $6.20, $3.60 and $2.20 in winning the second leg of the Triple Crown for 3-year-olds, which includes the Belmont Stakes.

Hill Rise returned $2.20 to show.

Northern Dancer, who now has a record of seven straight victories and an enviable mark of never having finished out of the money in 16 career starts, boosted his earnings for the year to $304,237 and for his career to $519,092.

Hartack, as in the Derby, said that his main concern was "what Shoemaker would do with Hill Rise."

The winning jockey said that in the duel turning into the stretch, "I won the battle for the lead and I think that took it out of Hill Rise. I don't think anyone was closing on us at the end."

Big Pete, noted for his early speed, and Quadrangle took the small field through the first quarter in 25 1-5 seconds. Quadrangle then moved to the front and hit the first half mile in 48 2-5 with the Dancer moving smoothly in third place.

Hill Rise was on the outside with Shoe keeping an eye on Hartack, just as he did two weeks ago at Churchill Downs. The three-quarters of a mile was run in 1:12 and 2-5, with Quadrangle still on the front end, but by not any great margin.

They were heading out of the back stretch when Hill Rise started his move in on the leaders, but Shoemaker found Hartack also ready to go. For one-eighth of a mile it looked as if the two might take command and stage a stretch duel as they did in the Derby, which the Dancer won by a neck.

But trainer Horatio Luro had given Hartack a razor sharp colt this clear, sunshiny day, and controversial Willie — who would rather sign an autograph than chat with the press—made most of it.

Hartack Praises 'Dancer' For Victory in Preakness

By GORDON BEARD

Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP)—Bill Hartack, the angry young man of thoroughbred racing, was almost polite Saturday when he described his Preakness victory aboard gritty little Northern Dancer, a victory worth $12,420 to the jockey.

"This horse gives you everything he has when you ask him," Hartack said. "He is easy to ride and extremely sensitive to what you want him to do."

There was only one waspish outburst by the brilliant but volatile jockey. That came when a photographer called him "Willie," a pet peeve with Hartack.

"My name is Bill," he snapped. "Where did you come from? One of these days you are going to learn you spoil everything for everyone else."

Then he resumed answering questions. He stopped off only for a television interview before giving audience to newsmen, a far cry from his antics after the Kentucky Derby two weeks ago when he signed autographs for an hour before making himself available for questioning.

Just as in his Kentucky Derby victory, Hartack said, he kept his eye on the favored Hill Rise and let the rest of the field take care of itself.

"I was prepared to meet the challenge of Hill Rise at any part of the race and throw the challenge back at him," Hartack said after his 2¼ length triumph in the second leg on the Triple Crown.

"When Hill Rise moved up on us in the backstretch, I decided to keep Northern Dancer about a head in front," Hartack said. "Our battle consumed a lot of time—about a quarter of a mile—until Northern Dancer opened up a lead about 50 yards before the final turn.

"My horse labored in the stretch, but the others just as much. This was an extremely tiring race track. The horse had to be in great shape to handle it."

Hartack said Northern Dancer was not as strong over the last eighth of a mile as he was in winning the Kentucky Derby by a neck over Hill Rise, but at the same time he did not use the whip as much because no one was gaining in the stretch drive.

Hartack contended that Willie Shoemaker aboard Hill Rise had to ride a different race than he did in the Derby because of criticism of Shoemaker's late move in the Kentucky classic.

"I thought he rode a good race in the Derby," Hartack said, "but he had to do something different—he couldn't otherwise."

Shoemaker said "I got beat legit" when he climbed off Hill Rise, third place finisher behind The Scoundrel.

"I had good position and Hill Rise moved when I wanted, but he just couldn't keep up," he said.

"Northern Dancer is just a better horse," Shoemaker said of the colt he gave up after the Flamingo to switch to Hill Rise in the Derby and Preakness.

Germany Leads Reds Net Team

LONDON (AP)—Sweden, Italy, France and Yugoslavia advanced to the quarter-finals of the European Zone Davis Cup tennis competition Saturday and West Germany took a commanding lead over the Soviet Union.

A doubles victory by the Germans Sunday can eliminate the Russians and complete the round of eight. Defending champion Britain, South Africa and Denmark had moved up previously.

The second - seeded Swedes gained an unbeatable 3-0 lead over Czechoslovakia at Prague when Ulf Schmidt and Jan-Eric Lundquist won in doubles over Milan Holecek and Stepan Koudelka 6-3, 13-11, 6-3.

Italy's strong team went 3-0 ahead of Rhodesia at Genoa. The veteran Nicola Pietrangeli, showing no traces of a recent heart attack, and 19-year-old Giordano Maioli, subbing for the ailing Sergio Tacchini, won in doubles over Adrian Bey and Frank Salomon 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5.

The doubles team of Pierre Darmon and Daniel Contet also clinched a quarter-final berth for France by beating Jan Hage and Tom Okker of Holland at Paris 6-3, 13-11, 3-6, 6-3. This gave France a 3-0 lead.

The Davis Cup series is best of five matches, with two opening singles, a doubles and final singles with line-ups reversed. Thus with 3-0 leads, Sweden and France will be playing the final singles Sunday as formalities.

Yugoslavia completed a 3-0 rout over Argentina at Belgrade, winning a delayed doubles and the two final singles. In the doubles, halted by darkness Friday, Boro Jovanovic and Nikola Pilic defeated Eduardo Soriano and Roberto Aubone 7-5, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 7-5. In singles, Jovanovic crushed Aubone 6-1, 6-1, 6-3 and Pilic topped Soriano 6-4, 6-4, 7-5.

Christian Kuhnke and Ingo Buding were the Germans who swept the opening singles from Russia at Cologne. Kuhnke beat Alexander Metreveli 6-3, 6-4, 6-2. Buding topped the Soviet's best player, Thomas Lejus, 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

In earlier matches, Britain beat Holland, South Africa won over Norway and Denmark [illegible].

Miller Named Most Valuable In Big Eight Track Meet

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Kansas used distance power and a 63-point effort in the field events for its 11th Big Eight outdoor track crown in 13 years while Colorado hurdler Jim Miller had a hand in three of five meet records here Saturday.

Missouri had to settle for a distant third behind Nebraska despite Robin Lingle's victories in the mile and three-mile.

Kansas scored 126 points, Nebraska 105, Missouri 86, Oklahoma 63, Oklahoma State 58, Colorado 57, Kansas State 17 and Iowa State 12.

Miller won the Henry Schulte award for the outstanding athlete in the meet. He anchored the 440 relay team to a sizzling record of 40.5, broke his own meet mark in the 330 hurdles with a 36.4, tied the high hurdles record in 14 fleet and anchored the third place mile relay team for 24 points.

Lingle won the mile in 4:05.9 and the three mile in 14:26.9, both slightly off meet records.

Nebraska led the field in gold medals with six, two by Victor Brooks, who set a record of 47-7 in the triple jump and won the broad jump in 24-7¾.

Nebraska scored a 22-point wallop in the 440-dash, won by Dave Crooks in 47 flat, and Lynn Headley of the Huskers took the 110 in 9.5, beating Oklahoma's Olympian Anthony Watson.

Watson, who was second in the broad jump, was forced to scratch in the 220, won by Nebraska's Kent McClaoghan in 21.3. Watson had been out with a leg injury the past three weeks and competed with a heavily taped thigh.

Nebraska won the mile relay in 3:10.9, with Crooks anchoring. Oklahoma State's Preston Hoisinger won the pole vault at 15-8. Floyd Manning of Kansas and Jim Farrell of Oklahoma cleared the same height but tied for second on the basis of misses.

Missouri was 1-2 in the shot put, with Bob Neuman's 65-9 winning. Kansas finished 1-2 in the javelin, won by Tom Purma at 224-1. Oklahoma's Dick Inman won the discus at 167-8.

Scotland's Jim Clark Takes Pole Slot In Qualifying for Indianapolis 500

By DALE BURGESS
Associated Press Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jimmy Clark of Scotland captured the pole position for the Indianapolis 500-mile auto race Memorial Day in record-shattering competition Saturday with America's greatest drivers.

It was a great day for Ford's new special racing engines and British car-builder Colin Chapman. Bobby Marshman, Pottstown, Pa., earned the No. 2 starting position in another Lotus-Ford.

Clark, second in the 500 last year, boosted the qualifying record to 158.828 miles an hour and set a one-lap record of 159.377 for the field to shoot at in three remaining qualification days.

Sixteen drivers qualified cars, filling almost half of the 33-car starting field, and 15 of them bettered the 1963 10-mile time trials record of 151.1 by race winner Parnelli Jones, Torrance, Calif.

Police estimated the crowd at more than 200,000. The throng poured into the 400-acre Indianapolis Motor Speedway grounds in such volume that the gates had to be closed at one time until the interior traffic could be straightened out.

Third in the front row will be a new rear-engine Watson-Ford driven by Rodger Ward of Indianapolis, twice winner of the race. Ward qualified at 156.4. Marshman's speed was 157.9.

Alongside Jones in the second row will be A. J. Foyt, Houston, Tex., former 500 winner and defending U.S. Auto Club champion, and Dan Gurney, Costa Mesa, Calif., Clark's teammate on the Lotus-Ford team. Both did over 154.

Big Names of Pro Football Facing Trades This Week

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Even the big name stars of the National Football League will be reading the papers this week when the trade-minded owners get together for the annual spring meeting in New York.

If men like Tommy McDonald, Buddy Dial, Sam Huff, Sonny Jurgensen, Norm Snead and Dick Modzelewski can go, nobody is safe. Since the close of the season, 25 players have been involved in 11 separate deals. The end is not in sight.

Joe Kuharich, the wheeling and dealing new coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, is ready to make some more moves. For instance, the Eagles are loaded in backs now that Carl Gros has joined the club from the Green Bay Packers. That makes either Ted Dean or Clarence Peaks, or perhaps both, available. The Eagles have been making strides but they need plenty more.

Vince Lombardi, who doubles as coach and general manager at Green Bay will be in town. NFL observers are wondering if there is more to the Jim Ringo-Earl Gros for Lee Roy Caffey swap with the Eagles than meets the eye. The Packers insist they are in good shape at center with Bob Skoronski moving over from tackle to handle the job.

George Halas, always quiet between seasons, still has made no announcement about Bill George. The vetrean linebacker played out his option last season and became a free agent May 1. However, George says he wants to play with the Bears and Halas says he wants George to stay with him. Apparently the only thing that stands between them is cash.

Halas also will attend the meetings. Perhaps Bill McPeak of Washington will be on hand along with Kuharich. Allie Sherman certainly will drop over from the Giants' office.

Unless some trades pop, the meetings do not look too exciting. The agenda is very short. Perhaps the most important thing to be decided is the division of the $1,800,000 television money from the championship game. The title game is the main support of the player pension fund. When the league got $926,000 for the championship game last two years they put $450,000 in the pension fund.

Ordell Braase of the Baltimore Colts, president of the NFL players' group, is expected to appear to ask that each player receive $100 a game during the exhibition season instead of $50.

One proposed rule change, tabled at the Miami meetings in January, would add a sixth official to be known as a time keeper. He would take over the clock-watching job now handled by the back judge in addition to his other duties.

A league spokesman said there were no plans for expansion and there was nothing on the agenda to indicate that any civic group would appear before the league asking for a franchise.

The business managers meet Monday and the owners get together for official league meetings Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sammy Baugh Joins Oilers As Back Coach

HOUSTON (AP) — Sammy Baugh, a record-breaking passer who played 16 seasons in the National Football League, will join the Houston Oilers of the American Football League as offensive backfield coach, it was announced Saturday.

Baugh starred for Washington in the NFL from 1937 through 1952 and coached New York in the AFL in the league's first two seasons, 1960 and 1961. The former Texas Christian ace also was on the coaching staffs at Hardin-Simmons, Oklahoma State and Tulsa University.

The Houston Colt .45s won 13 of 18 extra inning games during 1963, their second year in the National League.

Boyer, Javier Star as Cards Slip by Braves

By MIKE RECHT

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Ken Boyer and Julian Javier each drove in two runs as St. Louis handed Milwaukee its fourth straight defeat Saturday, 6-5.

Boyer, who had four hits, singled home Doug Clemens in the third inning and sent Carl Warwick home with what turned out to be the winning run in the eighth.

Javier singled across Jeoff Long and Tim McCarver in the Cards' three-run fifth.

Glen Gabrielson singled with one out in the ninth. Mike de la Hoz then forced him at second before Denis Menke clouted a home run off Ron Taylor. The Cardinal reliever, however, got Bolling on a pop up.

Southpaw winner Ray Sadecki, with the aid of three double plays, set down the Braves on seven hits before giving way to Taylor with two out and a man on second in the eighth.

Pirates Topple Dodgers To End Winning Skein

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Willie Stargell drove in four runs with a pair of singles Saturday as the Pittsburgh Pirates broke a three-game Los Angeles winning streak by defeating the Dodgers 7-4.

Left-hander Bob Veale, picking up his second victory in five decisions, went 7 1-3 innings and allowed the Dodgers only three hits, all singles. But he walked nine and made two wild pitches, both of which led to runs.

Al McBean held the Dodgers hitless the last 1 2-3 innings.

Willhite lasted 5 2-3 innings and was touched for 8 of the 11 Pittsburgh hits. He had a 2-0 lead after five but Dick Schofield and Manny Mota opened the sixth with singles and Bob Clemente scored Mota with a double.

The Pirates got two more in the sixth. Mota walked, Clemente hit his second double and Stargell brought them in with a single.

Mota drew another walk in the ninth, took third on a single by Bill Virdon and scored his third run of the game on a sacrifice fly by Gene Freese.

Doug Camilli got two of the three Dodger hits and drove in two runs with one of them, an eighth-inning single.

Cleveland Takes Top AL Slot

DETROIT (AP) — Cleveland took over sole possession of first place in the American League as Max Alvis and Woodie Held hit solo homers, giving the Indians a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

rupted a brilliant pitching duel rupted a brilliant pitching duel between Detroit's Ed Rakow and Cleveland left-hander Jack Kralick.

Kralick won his third straight game without a loss and lowered his earned run average to 1.13, second best in the league.

The Indians picked up six of their hits in the first three innings but could not score.

The Tigers posted one serious scoring threat earlier in the game when Don Demeter doubled leading off the fourth inning. But Kralick got the next two batters on infield bounders and Norm Cash flied to center.

It was the seventh loss for the Tigers in nine one-run decisions this year.

Mays Excited as His Fans Over Early Season Streak

By JOE REICHLER

Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Mays' early season attack on Roger Maris' home run record and his threat to become the first in 23 years to hit .400 has the baseball fans agog.

* * *

But none are as excited about Mays' batting feats as Willie himself. The brilliant San Francisco Giant center fielder is thrilled by it all, but he is fighting a battle within himself to prevent his true feelings from cropping out.

* * *

A wonderfully cooperative person, Mays has to use utmost restraint from being rude as he parries questions hurled at him concerning his chances of finishing with a .400 batting average. Or his chances of bettering Maris' 61 home runs over the course of a 162-game season.

"I'm not saying anything, but not anything," Willie backed off when the suggestion was made to him that he could be the first since Ted Williams in 1941 to hit .400.

Mays' true nature, however, came to the fore.

"I'm like this," he said. "If I'm going to break a record, please don't tell me. If I'm thinking about doing something real bad, I won't do it. Someone comes up to me and says, 'If you get a hit today, it will be your 2,000th.' You can bet I won't get the hit.

"Don't tell me things like that. Just let me go and play. Don't tell me nothing and I don't think about it and then I do it."

Through the Giants' first 21 games, Mays had a batting average of .481 with 11 home runs. No one in years had gotten off to as fast a start. How long did he think he could keep that up?

"Amazing, ain't it?" he said and laughed. "But it won't last. But I'd sure like to keep it going for a little while longer. I'm not doing anything different, but somehow the ball looks bigger coming into the plate. It always does look bigger when you're hitting."

There is another explanation although Mays is reluctant to talk about it. At 33 and with 12 full seasons behind him, Willie opened this season in his best frame of mind since his rookie year as the laughing Say-Hey kid of 20 in 1951.

It isn't so much that he's smarter and more experienced although that could be one of the underlying reasons. But for the first time in years, Mays is playing without the weight of marital or financial troubles on his mind.

It is two years since Willie's divorce became final. He had to borrow on his $100,000 salary from the Giants, and it took another year for Mays to dig out from his financial morass.

Now that he's almost in the clear, it has become clear to everybody what an unburdened and happy Mays is capable of accomplishing on the field.

"I've got real peace of mind now," Mays said. "The way I feel right now, as far as my health and frame of mind are concerned, I think I can go on playing for another 10 years."

The tremors you have just felt came from the collective shuddering of the National League pitchers.

HAS BASEBALL FANS AGOG—This is Willie Mays, the brilliant San Francisco Giants center fielder whose early season feats at the plate has baseball fans agog. Giants Edge Mets in 15th On Davenport's Home Run

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Jim Davenport, hitless in six previous trips to the plate, socked a two-out, two-run homer in the 15th inning Saturday, bringing San Francisco a 6-4 victory over the New York Mets.

Willie Mays sent the game into extra innings, hitting his 14th home run over the right field fence off Mets' reliever Larry Bearnarth with two out in the ninth. Mays was 2 for 7, and his average dropped nine points to .422.

The Mets had gone ahead 4-3 in their half of the ninth on singles by Roy McMillan and Charlie Smith and a pinch double by Ron Hunt.

Reds Top Cubs 5-2 On Homers

CHICAGO (AP) — Bases-empty home runs by Johnny Edwards, Bob Skinner and Gordie Coleman carried Cincinnati to a 5-2 victory over Chicago Saturday.

Coleman's homer came in the Reds' two-run eighth that sealed the triumph for Joe Nuxhall, his third in five decisions. Frank Robinson singled, stole second, went to third on a sacrifice and scored on Edwards' single for the other run.

Yankees Dial M for Win With Back-to-Back Homers

NEW YORK (AP)—A pair of back-to-back home runs by Roger Maris and shots into the stands by Mickey Mantle and Joe Pepitone helped end a three-game losing streak for the New York Yankees Saturday with a 10-6 victory over the Kansas City Athletics.

Maris hit his homers in the first and third innings with nobody on base. Mantle parked a 415-foot blow into the lower left field stands in the fourth, scoring Bobby Richardson. Pepitone added a solo homer in the seventh.

The Yankees made their 10 runs on 11 hits in the wild game which saw the Athletics get nine hits, one a home run by Manny Jiminez in the fifth with two on base.

Steve Hamilton got credit for his first pitching victory, relieving starter Stan Williams in the fourth. Moe Drabowsky was the loser, giving up five hits and four runs before being relieved by Joe Grzenda, the second of four A's pitchers, with two out in the third.

Softball Umpires Schedule Meeting

Radatz Wins Own Game With 10th Inning Single

BOSTON (AP)—Relief pitcher Dick Radatz singled with the bases loaded in the 10th inning Saturday, scoring Lou Clinton and giving the Boston Red Sox a 6-5 victory over Minnesota.

Radatz hit a 3-2 pitch off Jim Perry, who replaced Jerry Arrigo after Clinton doubled Carl Yastrzemski to third with one out. Yastrzemski had walked.

After Perry came in, he walked Tony Conigliaro purposely, then got Bob Tillman to force Yastrzemski at the plate for the second out before Radatz hit to right field.

The Red Sox tied the game 5-5 in the ninth on singles by Dick Stuart and pinch hitters Russ Nixon and Dick Williams. Ed Bressoud smashed a solo home run in the eighth for Boston.

Tom Jefferson Wins Golf Title In State Meet

PUEBLO (AP) — Denver's Thomas Jefferson nipped Denver's Abraham Lincoln by one stroke for the Colorado high school golf championship Saturday.

Jefferson had 629 to Lincoln's 630. Denver's George Washington was third with 634.

Dan Dymerski of Aurora Central took individual honors with rounds of 79, 72 and 74 for a 225 total. His par 72 was the best round of the day. In second place among the 15 top golfers was Rich Merino of Trinidad with 226. Dick Anderson of Boulder was third with 229.

Senators Defeat White Sox

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pitcher Bennie Daniels contributed a two-run homer to his own cause and profited by some zany Chicago base running Saturday as the Washington Senators defeated the White Sox 3-1.

The White Sox had the bases loaded, two out, and Ron Hansen at bat in the top of the eighth when Ron Kline came in to relieve Daniels.

Tom McCraw attempted to steal home on the second pitch to Hansen and was an easy out, Kline to Mike Brumley.

Earlier in the inning pinch hitter Minnie Minoso singled and attempted to go to third on Mike Hershberger's single to center but was out, Don Lock to Dom Zimmer.

Robinson, Powell Lead Baltimore Over Angels

By GORDON BEARD

Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Brooks Robinson and Boog Powell each singled across a run and hit a home run Saturday night, leading Baltimore to a 5-1 triumph over the Los Angeles Angels.

Robinson drove in Norm Siebern, who had doubled, and scored on Powell's single in the two-run sixth that put the Orioles in the lead 3-1. Robinson and Powell hit back-to-back home runs in the eighth off reliever Barry Latman.

In his last 17 games, Siebern has batted .414 with 24 hits in 58 trips. He has reached base 38 times in 71 trips during that span for an on-base percentage of .535.

Three Oriole pitchers combined to hold the Angels to four hits. Starter Steve Barber, out since April 23 with a pulled muscle, allowed two hits in five innings. Dick Hall and Stu Miller finished up.

Los Angeles scored in the first on a single and three walks. Baltimore tied it 1-1 in the fifth on pinch hitter Joe Gaines' run-producing single.

Bond Leads Colts Past Phils, 4-3

HOUSTON (AP) — Walt Bond drove in three runs Saturday night as Houston stopped the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 and knocked them out of first place in the National League.

The Phillies dropped one-half game behind San Francisco, which edged the New York Mets 6-4 in 15 innings.

Bond knocked across two runs in the fifth with a single after Farrell had singled, advanced to second on a sacrifice and went to third as Al Spangler singled and took second on a throw to the plate.

Bond's sacrifice fly scored Spangler with an unearned run in the third. Spangler had tripled home Eddie Kasko, who reached first on Richie Allen's bobble.

Twin Tunnels Win Approval

DENVER (AP) — Approval of a $535,000 supplemental appropriation to construct twin highway tunnels in Glenwood Canyon was announced Friday by the Colorado Highway Department.

The appropriation was approved by Gov. John A. Love.

A department spokesman said the twin tunnels would be constructed one mile east of Glenwood Springs. They will be 1,000 feet long and 32 feet wide, enough to accommodate two lanes of one-way traffic.

The department also announced it will soon start construction on 9.7 miles of highway from the Four Corners area to Utah on the Southern Ute Indian reservation.

The road will be financed by a $785,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Most Drownings Needless Medical Association Says

The summer swimming season is here again. If past averages hold, somewhat more than 6,000 Americans will drown. Most of these drownings could be avoided.

The basic rules of water safety should be well known to everyone old enough to read; they are repeated each season by health and safety organizations throughout the nation. And yet most drownings occur when someone has violated one of the safety rules.

There are the fundamentals— Never swim alone; Don't swim just after eating or when overly tired; Don't overestimate your ability and endurance; Swim at protected pools or beaches under the supervision of a trained lifeguard; If a boat overturns stay with it and don't try to swim a long distance to shore; Never dive into unknown waters.

Know about artificial respiration and how to apply it. The mouth-to-mouth method is explained in the First Aid Manual of the American Medical Association. It's not very difficult — Start immediately, the victim can survive without oxygen to the brain for only a few minutes; Put the victim on his back, pull the chin well up, make certain the windpipe is clear; Put your mouth over the victim's mouth, pinch shut his nose, and blow hard; Repeat 12 to 15 times per minute; Keep it up until medical help arrives.

Skin diving and SCUBA diving are fine sports that are drawing more enthusiasts each season. Both require special training and knowledge and good physical condition. If you plan to be a diver, take a course in underwater survival. And get yourself into good physical training for strong swimming.

Water skiing is another exhilarating sport, but it also has hazards. The man handling the boat should know what he's doing. The skier should always wear a life jacket. Even a strong swimmer can be winded by a hard fall at high speed.

Private pools are gaining rapid favor in the United States. If you have a pool, or use a neighbor's, there are certain safety fundamentals — Is the pool kept clean and the water chemically purified? Walk, don't run, about the pool, and be careful with horseplay. Fence the pool and keep the gate locked to keep out small children; Keep rescue equipment such as long poles and ring buoys handy; Keep bottles and glasses away from the concrete pool deck.

Are all in your family or household good swimmers? If not, arrange lessons at the YMCA or somewhere else in which qualified instructors conduct classes. Many drownings occur among non-swimmers or weak swimmers. A refresher course even for good swimmers might save a life by helping the swimmer to get into better physical condition.

A final thought — If you get into trouble in the water, don't panic. Keep your head, float on your back and paddle gently. It's possible to stay afloat for hours, if you don't panic and thresh out wildly.

SAFFRON FROM ABRUZZI

L'AQUILA, Italy (AP)—Since Roman days the Abruzzi Mountains around this town east of Rome have been Italy's major source of saffron.

The perfumed yellow powder obtained from the stigma of the fall - blooming crocus now is used as a food seasoning.

Sondermann Invited to England Meet

The British Foreign Office has asked Dr. Fred A. Sondermann, associate dean at Colorado College, to attend a two week conference on "The Atlantic Community and National Sovereignty" next February in England.

Dr. Sondermann, also associate professor of political science at the independent liberal arts college here, will be the first person from Colorado invited to attend the annual conference at Wilton Park, some 50 miles south of London.

The conference will deal with problems of economics, politics and defense in the Atlantic community. Participating in the conference will be government leaders and academic experts from Britain, the United States and Western Europe.

Prof. Sondermann, an authority on international relations, has been a member of the faculty at Colorado College for the past nine years. He is the author of "The Theory and Practice of International Relations," published in 1961 by Prentice Hall.

For the past few years he has been in charge of organizing Colorado College's symposia. This year he brought to the college campus more than 20 leading authorities in several fields for an extensive examination of the causes, conduct and consequences of World War II.

Dr. Sondermann, who holds a PhD in international relations from Yale University, is president of the International Relations Association and a member of the Western Political Science Association.

Student Tests Readied for June 2

Students planning to enter District 11 junior or senior high schools for the first time and those who will re-enter after an absence of a year or more can speed up the enrollment process by taking required tests June 2.

The Department of Pupil Accounting and Testing Services will administer the tests at Wasson and Palmer High Schools for pupils entering grades 10 through 12 next September. These students can arrange to take the tests by calling the office of the high school they will attend.

On June 2 they will report at 8 a.m. to the office of the appropriate high school office. Testing will take most of the day and students must make their own arrangements for lunch.

Tests for pupils entering grades seven through nine in September will be given at the District 11 Administration Building, 1115 N. El Paso St. Arrangements for these tests may be made by calling the Testing Department at 633-8773, extension 37.

Junior high testing will start at 8:30 a.m. and continue until 2:30 p.m. with an hour for lunch from noon to 1 p.m. Pupils may purchase their lunch at the North Junior cafeteria if they notify the Testing Department of their desire when they arrange to take the tests.

The test battery for both junior and senior high pupils includes tests of scholastic aptitude and achievement. Within a week after the June 2 testing session, pupils will have their class schedules and can start the school year in September without delay or interruption.

Kansas City and Los Angeles tied for least home runs in the American League in 1963. Each team hit 95.

Spruce-Up Week For Mailboxes Starts Today

Each spring the Post Office Department designates a week during which patrons on rural, city mounted, and box delivery star routes are encouraged to examine and improve, where necessary, the appearance of their mailboxes. This year this week has been selected.

The purpose of Mailbox Improvement Week is to call attention to the need for providing mail receptacles which are conveniently located, neat in appearance, safe to use, and which protect the mail from the weather.

Mailboxes that meet these requirement contribute to a more efficient delivery operation and, therefore, result in improved service to the entire route.

On rural routes, mailboxes of the approved traditional or contemporary design are required. Patrons still using obsolete, top opening boxes may continue to use them at that location provided they are kept in serviceable condition and otherwise meet the requirements.

Boxes and supports should be kept painted and free from rust. The name of the owner should be shown on the side of the box visible to the carrier as he approaches, or on the door where boxes are grouped. The assigned box number may be shown.

On city mounted routes with curbline delivery, the box may be the rural type, either the traditional or contemporary design. Any other model used must protect mail from weather. Where boxes are not located directly in front of the owner's residence, the patron's name and address must be shown on the box.
